Invitation To Repent
Good Salesmanship
Science and Love
Our Ancestor?

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

POPE PIUS, in an important encyclical invites the world to repent of its sins, especially those powers that from east to west "tread underfoot the rights of the church."

Another important sin, rebuked in the same encyclical, is woman's immodest dress." The "Feast of the Sacred Heart" is set apart for repentance, and a new special form of prayer is prescribed.

Pope Pius, publishing his encyclical, has the satisfaction of knowing that millions all over the world will read and heed the admonition.

Fortunately also, attacks on religion, like attacks on modesty, fade and are forgotten.

It is less than a century and a half since every church was closed in Paris by order of the Commune. All thought that religion had been permanently abolished.

MR. SCHURMAN, who represents this country in Germany, says that Germans in the United States would be powerful in maintaining world peace. There is some foolish excitement about that in France and elsewhere.

The American ambassador is ambassador to Germany and it is his business to say pleasant things about Germany and the Germans. He is our international salesman there. We send him to be polite to Germany. Our ambassador to France is extremely polite to France. Good salesmen.

MODERN science, guided by moving pictures, says, regardless of Anita Loos, that a brunette feels love and the romantic passion more intensely than a blonde.

The ladies, one blonde, one brunette, sat watching an intensely affectionate moving picture, while a machine registered their blood pressure and breathing to see how much the love scenes excited them and awakened their emotions.

As the lovers on the screen embraced, indicating that they thought pretty well of each other, the blood pressure of the brunette increased, her breathing became more rapid. The blonde's blood pressure and breathing were also affected, but not as much as the brunette's.

This was tried on different blondes, different brunettes, and with different moving pictures.

In every case the brunette responded more satisfactorily, or, in the language of the day, proved herself a "wilder woman."

That's what the scientists and the machine said.

But the blonde lady possibly has her breathing and blood pressure under better control.

And, after all, it is his own emotion that the average gentleman cares about, not so much the emotion of the party of the second part.

Be that as it may, the scientists tell you, and swear they can prove it, that emotionally the brunette is ahead of the blonde. But you may do and think as you please about it. Cleopatra was an Egyptian brunette, Juliette a north Italian blonde.

MISS E. L. HEINE, nicknamed "Bobby," comes from South Africa, and reflects great credit on that part of the world. She is tall, with golden hair only 17 years old, and a wonderfully fine tennis player.

If South Africa can produce girls of this kind, then South Africa, one of these days will be a country rivaling the power of mother Britain. Such daughters as this produce great sons.

You wonder why tennis ladies insist on wearing skirts. The skirts do not stay down, flop around, impede movement. Sensible knickerbockers would be better.

DARWIN never said that man descended from monkeys. He said all animals came from animals of an inferior form, through evolution, a process of change lasting through millions of years.

He did not believe that monkeys were our ancestors and never said so. But he thought that monkeys, including the chimpansee, were closely related to some other animal form from which men did descend.

Science will tell you that the number of bones in a chimpansee's body is the same as in our own, and the bones answer the same purposes. The blood of this strange animal is like our blood.

"Ah!" you will say, "but I have a soul and this chimpansee has none. Don't talk to me about him." Quite right, each is entitled to his own opinion.

Perhaps, for that matter, we should be flattered if we knew what a chimpansee thinks as he looks at us and wonders what on earth we think we are all over about.

COURT ACTION NECESSARY, IS TURNER RULING

Commissioners Without Authority To Declare County Office Vacant

COMPLAINT REQUIRED

New Recorder Can't Be Named Until Request Is Filed with Judge

A formal opinion designating the legal procedure for declaring the office of recorder of Marion County vacant and providing for the filling of such a vacancy was given today by Attorney General Edward C. Turner to Prosecuting Attorney Frank Wiedemann.

Charles E. Smith, Marion County recorder, has been missing since April 27, last. A report covering an examination of Smith's official records by state examiners will be made public by State Auditor Joseph Tracy, Tuesday, it was announced.

Turner held that, under the existing circumstances, the Marion County Board of Commissioners possesses no legal right to declare the office of county recorder vacant.

Complaint Required

The attorney general pointed out that Ohio laws provide that where a county recorder has refused, or wilfully neglected, to perform the official duties imposed upon by law, or has been guilty of misconduct in office, a complaint should be filed against him in the Common Pleas Court of that county, signed by five per cent of the qualified electors, and that, after proper notice has been given, within 20 days after the complaint has been filed, the Common Pleas court shall hear the complaint and render a judgment of forfeiture of office, "if the facts so warrant."

"Where a vacancy occurs in the office of County Recorder, it is the duty of the county commissioners to appoint a suitable person to fill such office, who, upon giving bond and taking the oath of office, as provided by law, holds his office until his successor is elected and qualified," Turner ruled.

Term of Service

"If a judgment of forfeiture is entered against a County Recorder for misconduct in office and a vacancy declared, a suitable person appointed by the county commissioners to such office will hold the same until the November election this year and the qualification of the elected successor immediately thereafter," Turner ruled.

"The elected successor at the November, 1928, election would hold the office for the unexpired term of the county recorder, whose office was vacated—until the first Monday in January, 1931," the attorney general held.

DRIVER KILLED

Racer Meets Death When Cars Pile Up on Track

Toledo, May 28—The body of Roy Goodwin, Ann Arbor, Mich., auto race driver who was killed here yesterday, was being returned to his home for burial today.

Goodwin was killed yesterday afternoon at the Fort Miami tracks in the sixth lap of a 100-mile race when several cars piled up.

Other drivers sustained only minor injuries.

HOME DESTROYED

Hiram, May 28—The former home of E. V. Zollers, former president of Hiram College, was in ruins here today following a Sunday fire, caused by defective wiring. The house was occupied by Ralph Gillette.

500 Local School Pupils To Take Part in Annual Concert Program Tuesday

Chorus and Orchestra Will Appear in Entertainment at Chautauqua Pavilion Planned by Howard M. Temple, Music Supervisor

Approximately 500 children of the Marion Public Schools will be presented by Howard M. Temple, music supervisor, in the second annual concert of the music department of the local grade schools Tuesday, afternoon and night, at Chautauqua Pavilion, Garfield Park.

The chorus, comprised of 400 children, will sing the cantata, "Rip Van Winkle," with music by Ira B. Wilson and text adopted from Irving by Edith Sanford Tillotson.

As a prelude the orchestra, numbering about 95 pieces, will play the following selections: march, "America Forever," and overture, "Diana," Emil Ascher; "The Jolly Blacksmith," a descriptive humorous polka by A. S. Bowman; march, "Our Aviator," with playing dedicated to Col. Lindbergh, and the "Old Glory Selection," a Tocaben arrangement by Sorsby.

Misses Marion V. McNeil and Dorothy Briggs, teachers, will play the piano accompaniments for the vocal numbers.

The concert will bring to a close activities of the musical department of local schools. Performances will be at 3:15 and 8:15 o'clock, grade schools to dismiss early the afternoon showing.

10 PERSONS KILLED IN TRAFFIC CRASHES

Grade Crossing Accidents Cause Majority of Week-end Deaths

Leaden skies and threatening weather over the state generally kept traffic fatalities at a minimum over the week-end.

Accidents reported were:

Toledo: Charles Babcock of Swanton, died of injuries sustained when auto struck a tree.

Kenton: W. R. Smith Jr., was killed when an auto overturned.

Port Clinton: Mr. and Mrs. George Madsion, Toledo, were killed when their automobile was hit by a New York Central train at a grade crossing.

Bryan: Roy Rudolph died today in a Defiance hospital following injuries sustained when his auto was struck by a Cincinnati and Northern train. His cousin Raymond Rudolph was instantly killed in the crash.

Port Clinton: George Madison, 72, and Mrs. Laura Mexico, 70, were killed when their automobile was struck by speeding New York Central passenger train near here.

North Jackson: A woman, believed to be Mrs. Nellie Johnson, 55, of Akron was killed when an automobile she was driving was struck by a Pennsylvania ten a mile here.

Marion: George Pedens, 19 of Iberson, Wyandot County, was instantly when his automobile and struck a telephone pole.

DAWES VOTE HOLDS SENATE IN SESSION

Upper House Ties on Resolution Calling for Tuesday Adjournment

Washington, May 28—Under dramatic circumstances, Vice President Dawes today defeated the administration's resolution to adjourn Congress at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Although the House adopted the adjournment resolution by a big majority, the Senate voted 40 to 40 on the question of going home tomorrow. This gave the vice president an opportunity to vote.

"The vote is 40 ayes and 40 noes," said Dawes. "The ayes have it. The chair votes his vote with the ayes and declares the motion carried."

His vote thus allowed the resolution to pass and it went to the House for concurrence.

"DIG DEEP" IS ADVICE GIVEN TO GRADUATES

High School Seniors Hear Commencement Sermon by Dr. B. L. George

CHURCH IS CROWDED

Large Audience Hears Pastor Urge Building Careers on Firm Foundation

Taking his text the scriptural passage: "He is like a man which built a house and digged deep and laid the foundation on a rock; and when the flood arose the stream beat vehemently upon that house, and could not shake it for it was founded upon a rock," Dr. B. L. George, pastor of Epworth M. E. Church, gave the commencement sermon for Harding High School graduates last night at the church. His subject was, "The Hidden Side of Life."

The service was one of the most largely-attended ever held in Marion Many persons being unable to gain admittance to the church. All seats and standing room was filled.

Seniors, attired in grey caps and gowns, occupied the center section of the church, entering in a processional which followed a prelude of organ music. An extensive program of vocal and organ music was furnished by the choirs of Epworth and First Presbyterian Churches under direction of W. E. Orcutt and Charles Collmer.

All Builders

"We are all builders, confronted with the task of planning our careers," Dr. George said. "Are we going to have a care only for appearance, 'to merely get by,' or are we going to build in the interest of permanency and substantiability?

Dr. George informed the graduates

YOUNG INTERNE IS FIGHTING FOR LIFE

Signals for Stimulant When He Approaches Another Crisis

Chicago, May 28 — During brief periods of consciousness, a 26-year-old interne at the Presbyterian Hospital, today was directing a fight to save his life.

The young physician is Dr. Clyde Jensen. He hovers between life and death as the result of an infection incurred while assisting at the autopsy of the body of a man who died of peritonitis.

Although several times given up as lost, the young man's stamina and courage have pulled him through the crises. During the brief lucid periods, in which he is scarcely more than half conscious, the young physician gropes for his pulse and then signals for a stimulant when he senses the approach of another crisis.

Three noted physicians, staff members and associates of Dr. Jensen, are doing what they can to win the battle. They agree, however, that only the young physician's iron will is keeping him alive now. They hold little hope for his recovery.

Dr. Jensen was an honor student at Dartmouth University and later graduated from Ruth Medical College.

Baseball is the only thing a woman ever admits that she doesn't understand.

FLIER IS DYING, TWO OTHERS HURT

Controls Lock with Plane at Height of 100 Feet; Crashes to Earth

Athens, May 28—One man is reported dying in Sheltering Arms Hospital here today, and two others have minor injuries as the result of an airplane crash.

Emerson Carsey, 28, who was pinned beneath the wreckage of the plane, cannot live, according to hospital physicians. Lieut. L. H. Scott, Marietta, pilot of the plane, and Lieut. Burt Barnes, Athens, are the injured.

Scott, operating under the name of "Scotty's flying circus," had taken Carsey and Barnes as passengers in his plane, said to have been a new biplane. The plane reached a height of 100 feet when the controls locked. The ship slipped into a dive and crashed to the earth.

Carsey was found pinned beneath the wreckage of the plane by spectators who rushed to the scene. He was taken to the hospital where it was found that he was suffering from a fractured skull, both arms broken and possible internal injuries.

GOFF MAY DEFEAT SECRETARY HOOVER

West Virginia Senator Waging Aggressive Fight for Popular Vote

Charleston, W. Va., May 28—Interest in the West Virginia Republican primary election on Tuesday, May 29, centers largely on the fight for the presidential preference and the nomination for United States Senator.

Guy D. Goff, junior senator from West Virginia, as a "native son and a Republican whose Republicanism cannot be questioned" has been waging an intensively aggressive fight for the popular vote against Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, and will close his campaign at Morgantown tonight.

Two weeks ago, Hoover would have swept the state. Since Senator Goff's entry, however a decided change has been evident and observers today were of the opinion that Goff will go over with a good margin. Reasons for the reaction to the Hoover candidacy are many, but Republican leaders cite chiefly the invasion of the state by "foreign speakers, writers and reporters," who are called "carpet-baggers" in many quarters, as the cause of the upset in a state already considered in the Hoover column.

Senator Goff's undenied charge that emissaries of Secretary Hoover twice approached him after he had filed with the suggestion that he "make a trade" by making Hoover second choice with the delegation on the condition that Hoover would not file in the state, has caused red-hot resentment on the part of West Virginians generally.

In the Democratic contest for president, there is every reason to believe that the choice of West Virginia will be Alfred E. Smith of New York. He has the backing of Charles Ostenton, national committeeman, who has placed a complete slate in the field. The James Reed forces, led by State Senators Clyde Beecher Johnson and A. C. Herold have the indorsement of the W. C. T. U. It is generally believed Smith will sweep the state.

H. H. REIDENBAUGH DIES IN HOSPITAL

Salesman of Alloy Cast Steel Co. Succumbs After Operation

Henry Harrison Reidenbaugh, 58, a lifelong resident of this city, died at 5 o'clock this morning at Covert Hospital in Detroit, according to word received by relatives here. His death followed an abdominal operation Saturday.

Mr. Reidenbaugh had been removed to Detroit, Thursday. The body is being brought here this afternoon for funeral services, for which arrangements have not as yet been made.

Mr. Reidenbaugh, who resided at 610 Oak-st, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Reidenbaugh, 307 Oak-st, and was born in this city June 25, 1870. He was popularly known as "Dick" Reidenbaugh. His mother was formerly Miss Kathryn Kunz. He was a member of First Reformed Church and of Canby Lodge, No. 51, Knights of Pythias. He had been employed as a traveling salesman by the Alloy Steel Castings Co.

Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Eva Smith Reidenbaugh, a son, Charles, his parents, a sister, Mrs. W. C. Barry, Summit-st, and two brothers, Ray Reidenbaugh, Bellefontaine, and Clifford Reidenbaugh, W. Columbia-st.

"THE MYSTERY AT STYLES"

The Most Baffling, Fascinating Mystery Novel of the Year

By Agatha Christie

CHAPTER 1

THE intense interest aroused in the public by what was known at the time as "The Styles Case" has now somewhat subsided. Nevertheless, in view of the world-wide notoriety which attended it, I have been asked, both by my friend Poirot and the family themselves, to write an account of the whole story. This, we trust, will effectually silence the sensational rumors which still persist.

I will therefore briefly set down the circumstances which led to my being connected with the affair.

I had been invalided home from the Front; and, after spending some months in a rather depressing Convalescent Home, was given a month's sick leave. Having no near relations or friends, I was trying to make up my mind what to do, when I ran across John Cavendish. I had seen very little of him for some years. Indeed, I had never known him particularly well. He was a good fifteen years my senior, for one thing, though he hardly looked his forty-five years. As a boy, though, I had often stayed at Styles, his mother's place, in Essex.

We had a good yarn about old times, and it ended in his inviting me down to Styles to spend my leave there.

"The mater will be delighted to see you again—after all those years," he added.

"Your mother keeps well?" I asked.

"Oh, yes. I suppose you know that she has married again?"

I am afraid I showed my surprise rather plainly. Mrs. Cavendish, who had married John's father when he was a widower with two sons, had been a handsome woman of middle-age as I remembered her. She certainly could not be a day less than seventy now. I recalled her as an energetic, autocratic personality, somewhat inclined to charitable and social notoriety, with a fondness for opening bazaars and playing the Lady Bountiful. She was a most generous woman, and possessed a considerable fortune of her own.

Their country-place, Style Court, had been purchased by Mr. Cavendish early in their married life. He had been completely under his wife's ascendancy, so much that, on dying, he left the place to her for her life-time, as well as the larger part of his income; an arrangement that was distinctly unfair to his two sons. Their step-mother, however, had always been most generous to them; indeed, they were so young at the time of their father's remarriage that they always thought of her as their own mother.

Lawrence, the younger, had been a delicate youth. He had qualified as a doctor but early relinquished the profession of medicine, and lived at home while pursuing literary ambitions; though his verses never had any marked success.

John practised for some time as a barrister, but had finally settled down to the more congenial life of a country squire. He had married two years ago and had taken his wife to live at Styles, though I entertained a shrewd suspicion that he would have preferred his mother to increase his allowance, which would have enabled him to have a home of his own. Mrs. Cavendish, however, was a lady who liked to make her own plans, and expected other people to fall in with them, and in this case she certainly had the whip hand, namely: the purse strings.

John noticed my surprise at the news of his mother's remarriage and smiled rather ruefully.

"Rotten little bounder, too!" he said savagely. "I can tell you, Hastings, it's making life jolly difficult for us. As for Eve—you remember Eve?"

"No."

"Oh, I suppose she was after your time. She's the mater's factotum, companion, Jack of all trades! A great sport—old Eve! Not precisely young and beautiful, but as gay as they make them."

"You were going to say—?"

"Oh, this fellow! He turned up from nowhere, on the pretext of being a second cousin or something of Evie's, though she didn't seem particularly keen to acknowledge the relationship. The fellow is an absolute outsider, anyone can see that. He's got a great black beard, and wears patent leather boots in all weathers! But the mater cottoned to him at once, took him on as secretary—you know how she's always running a hundred societies?"

I nodded.

"Well, of course the war has turned the hundreds into thousands. No doubt the fellow was very useful to her. But you could have knocked us all down with a feather when, three months ago, she suddenly announced that she and Alfred were engaged! The fellow must be at least twenty years younger than she is! It's simply brazen-faced fortune hunting; but there you are—she is her own mistress, and she's married him."

"It must be a difficult situation for you all."

"Difficult! It's damnable!"

Thus it came about that, three days later, I descended from the train at Styles St. Mary, an absurd little station, with no apparent reason for existence, perched up in the midst of green fields and country lanes. John Cavendish was waiting on the platform, and piloted me out to the car.

"Got a drop or two of petrol still, you see," he remarked. "Mainly owing to the mater's activities."

The village of Styles St. Mary was situated about two miles from the little station, and Styles Court lay a mile the other side of it. It was a still, warm day in early July. As one looked out over the flat Essex country, lying so green and pastoral under the afternoon sun, it seemed almost impossible to believe that, not so very far away, a great war was now running its appointed course. I felt I had positively slipped into another world. As we turned in at the lodge gates, John said:

"I'm afraid you'll find it very quiet down here, Hastings."

"My dear fellow, that's just what I want."

"Oh, it's pleasant enough if you want to lead the idle life. I drill with the volunteers twice a week, and lend a hand at the farms. My wife works regularly on the land. She is up at 5 every morning to milk, and keeps at it steadily until lunch-time. It's a jolly good life taking it all round—if it weren't for that fellow Alfred Inglethorp!" He checked the car suddenly, and glanced at his watch. "I wonder if we've time to pick up Cynthia. No, she'll have started from the hospital by now."

"Cynthia! That's not your wife?"

"No, Cynthia is a protegee of my mother's, the daughter of an old schoolfellow of hers, who married a rascally solicitor. He came a cropper, and the girl was left an orphan and penniless. My mother came to the rescue and Cynthia has been with us nearly two years now. She works in the Red Cross Hospital at Tadminster, seven miles away."

As he spoke the last words, we drew up in front of the fine old house. A lady in a stout tweed skirt, who was bending over a flower bed, straightened herself at our approach.

"Hullo, Evie, here's our wounded hero! Mr. Hastings—Miss Howard."

Miss Howard shook hands with a hearty, almost painful, grip. I had an impression of very blue eyes in a sunburnt face. She was a pleasant-looking woman of about forty, with a deep voice, almost manly in its stentorian tones, and had a large sensible square body, with feet to match—these last encased in good thick boots. Her conversation, I soon found, was couched in the telegraphic style.

"Weeds grow like house afire. Can't keep even with 'em. Shall press you in. Better be careful."

"I'm sure I shall be only too delighted to make myself useful," I responded.

"Don't say it. Never does. Wish you hadn't later."

"You're a cynic, Evie," said John, laughing. "Where's tea today—inside or out?"

"Out. Too fine a day to be cooped up in the house."

"Come on then, you're done enough gardening for today. The labourer is worthy of his hire,' you know. Come and be refreshed."

"Well," said Miss Howard, drawing off her gardening gloves, "I'm inclined to agree with you."

She led the way round the house to where tea was spread under the shade of a large sycamore.

"My wife, Hastings," said John.

I shall never forget my first sight of Mary Cavendish. Her tall, slender form, outlined against the bright light; the vivid sense of slumbering fire that seemed to find expression only in those wonderful tawny eyes of hers, remarkable eyes, different from any other woman's eyes that I have ever known; the intense power of stillness she possessed, which nevertheless conveyed the impression of a wild untamed spirit in an exquisitely civilized body—all these things are burnt into my memory. I shall never forget them.

She greeted me with a few words of pleasant welcome in a low clear voice, and I sank into a basket chair feeling distinctly glad that I had accepted John's invitation. Mrs. Cavendish gave me some tea, and her few quiet remarks heightened my first impression of her as a thoroughly fascinating woman.

An appreciative listener is always stimulating, and I described, in a humorous manner, certain incidents of my convalescent home, in a way which, I flatter myself, greatly amused my hostess. John, of course, good fellow though he is, could hardly be called a brilliant conversationalist.

At that moment a well remembered voice floated through the open French window near at hand:

"Then you'll write to the princess after tea, Alfred? I'll write to Lady Tadminster for the second day, myself. Or shall we wait until we hear from the princess? In case of a refusal, Lady Tadminster might open it the first day, and Mrs. Crosbie the second. Then there's the duchess—about the school fete."

There was the murmur of a man's voice, and then Mrs. Inglethorp's rose in reply:

"Yes, certainly. After tea will do quite well. You are so thoughtful, Alfred dear."

The French window swung open a little wider, and a handsome white-haired old lady, with a somewhat masterful cast of features, stepped out of it on to the lawn. A man followed her, a suggestion of deference in his manner.

Mrs. Inglethorp greeted me with effusion.

"Why, if it isn't too delightful to see you again, Mr. Hastings, after all these years. Alfred, darling, Mr. Hastings—my husband."

I looked with some curiosity at "Alfred darling." He certainly struck a rather alien note. I did not wonder at John objecting to his beard. It was one of the longest and blackest I have ever seen. He wore gold rimmed pince-nez, and had a curious impassivity of feature. It struck me that he might look natural on a stage, but was strangely out of place in real life. His voice was rather deep and unctuous. He placed a wooden hand in mine and said:

"This is a pleasure, Mr. Hastings." Then, turning to his wife: "Emily dearest, I think that cushion is a little damp."

She beamed fondly on him, as he substituted another with every demonstration of the tenderest care. Strange infatuation of an otherwise sensible woman!

With the presence of Mr. Inglethorp, a sense of constraint and veiled hostility seemed to settle down upon the company.

Miss Howard, in particular, took no pains to conceal her feelings. Mrs. Inglethorp, however, seemed to notice nothing unusual. Her volubility, which I remembered of old, had lost nothing in the intervening years, and she poured out a steady flood of conversation, mainly on the subject of the forthcoming bazaar which she was organizing and which was to take place shortly.

Occasionally she referred to her husband over a question of days or dates. His watchful and attentive manner never varied. From the very first I took a firm and rooted dislike to him, and I flatter myself that my first judgments are usually fairly shrewd.

Presently Mrs. Inglethorp turned to give some instructions about letters to Evelyn Howard, and her husband addressed me in his painstaking voice:

"Is soldiering your regular profession, Mr. Hastings?"

"No, before the war I was in Lloyd's."

"And you will return there after it is over?"

"Perhaps. Either that or a fresh start altogether."

Mary Cavendish leant forward.

"What would you really choose as a profession, if you could just consult your inclination?"

"Well, that depends."

"No secret hobby?" she asked. "Tell me—you're drawn to something? Every one is—usually something absurd."

"You'll laugh at me."

She smiled.

"Perhaps."

"Well, I've always had a secret hankering to be a detective!"

"The real thing—Scotland Yard? Or Sherlock Holmes?"

"Oh, Sherlock Holmes by all means. But really, seriously, I am awfully drawn to it. I came across a man in Belgium once, a very famous detective, and he quite inflamed me. He was a marvellous little fellow. He used to say that all good detective work was a mere matter of method. My system is based on his—though of course I have progressed rather further. He was a funny little man, a great dandy, but wonderfully clever."

"Like a good detective story myself," remarked Miss Howard. "Lots of nonsense written, though. Criminal discovered in last chapter. Every one dumfounded. Real crime—you'd know at once."

"There have been a great number of undiscovered crimes," I argued.

"Don't mean the police, but the people that are right in it. The family. You couldn't really hoodwink them. They'd know."

"Then," I said, much amused, "you think that if you were mixed up in a crime, say a murder, you'd be able to spot the murderer right off?"

"Of course I should. Mightn't be able to prove it to a pack of lawyers. But I'm certain I'd know. I'd feel it in my finger-tips if he came near me."

"It might be a 'she,' I suggested.

"Might. But murder's a violent crime. Associate it more with a man."

"Not in a case of poisoning," Mrs. Cavendish's clear voice startled me. "Dr. Bauerstein was saying yesterday that, owing to the general ignorance of the more uncommon poisons among the medical profession, there were probably countless cases of poisoning quite unsuspected."

"Why, Mary, what a gruesome conversation!" cried Mrs. Inglethorp. "It makes me feel as if a goose were walking over my grave. Oh, there's Cynthia!"

CHAPTER 2

A YOUNG GIRL in V. A. D. uniform ran lightly across the lawn.

"Why, Cynthia, you are late today. This is Mr. Hastings—Miss Murdoch."

Cynthia Murdoch was a fresh looking young creature, full of life and vigor. She tossed off her little V. A. D. cap, and I admired the great loose wave of her auburn hair, and the smallness and whiteness of her hand she held out to claim her tea. With dark eyes and eyelashes she would have been a beauty.

She flung herself down on the ground beside John, and as I handed her a plate of sandwiches she smiled up at me.

"Sit down here on the grass, do. It's ever so much nicer."

I dropped down obediently.

"You work at Tadminster, don't you, Miss Murdoch?"

She nodded.

"For my sins."

"Do they bully you, then?" I asked, smiling.

"I should like to see them!" cried Cynthia with dignity.

"I have got a cousin who is nursing," I remarked. "And she is terrified of 'Sisters.'"

"I don't wonder. Sisters are, you know, Mr. Hastings. They simply are! You've no idea! But I'm not a nurse, thank heaven, I work in the dispensary."

"How many people do you poison?" I asked, smiling.

Cynthia smiled too.

"Oh, hundreds!" she said.

"Cynthia," called Mrs. Inglethorp, "do you think you could write a few notes for me?"

"Certainly, Aunt Emily."

She jumped up promptly, and something in her manner reminded me that her position was a dependent one, and that Mrs. Inglethorp, kind as she might be in the main, did not allow her to forget it.

My hostess turned to me.

"John will show you your room. Supper is at half-past seven. We have given up late dinner for some time now. Lady Tadminster, our member's wife—she was the late Lord Abbotsbury's daughter—does the same. She agrees with me that one must set an example of economy. We are quite a war household; nothing is wasted here—every scrap of waste paper, even, is saved and sent away in sacks."

I expressed my appreciation, and John took me into the house and up the broad staircase, which forked right and left half-way to different wings of the building. My room was in the left wing, and looked out over the park.

John left me, and a few minutes later I saw him from my window walking slowly across the grass arm in arm with Cynthia Murdoch. I heard Mrs. Inglethorp call "Cynthia" impatiently, and the girl started and ran back to the house.

At the same moment, a man stepped out from the shadow of a tree and walked slowly in the same direction. He looked about 40, very dark with a melancholy clean-shaven face. Some violent emotion seemed to be mastering him.

He looked up at my window as he passed and I recognized him, though he had changed much in the 15 years that had elapsed since we last met. It was John's younger brother, Lawrence Cavendish. I wondered what it was that had brought that singular expression to his face.

Then I dismissed him from my mind, and returned to the contemplation of my own affairs.

The evening passed pleasantly enough; and I dreamed that night of that enigmatical woman, Mary Cavendish.

The next morning dawned bright and sunny, and I was full of the anticipation of a delightful visit.

I did not see Mrs. Cavendish until lunch-time, when she volunteered to take me for a walk, and we spent a charming afternoon roaming in the woods, returning to the house about 5.

As we entered the large hall, John beckoned us both into the smoking room. I saw at once by his face that something disturbing had occurred. We followed him in, and he shut the door after us.

"Look here, Mary, there's the deuce of a mess. Evie's had a row with Alfred Inglethorp, and she's off."

"Evie? Off?"

John nodded gloomily.

"Yes; you see she went to the mater and—oh, here's Evie herself."

Miss Howard entered. Her lips were set firmly together, and she carried a small suit-case. She looked excited and determined, and slightly on the defensive.

"At any rate," she burst out, "I've spoken my mind!"

"My dear Evelyn," cried Mrs. Cavendish, "this can't be true!"

Miss Howard nodded grimly.

"True enough! Afraid I said some things to Emily she won't forget or forgive in a hurry. Don't mind if they've only sunk in a bit. Probable water off a duck's back, though. I said right out: 'You're an old woman, Emily, and there's no fool like an old fool. The man's 20 years younger than you, and don't you fool yourself as to what he married you for. Money! Well, don't let him have too much of it. Farmer Raikes has got a very pretty young wife. Just ask your Alfred how much time he spends over there.' She was very angry. Natural! I went on: 'I'm going to warn you, whether you like it or not. That man would as soon murder you in your bed as look at you. He's a bad lot. You can say what you like to me, but remember what I've told you. He's a bad lot!'"

"What did she say?"

Miss Howard made an extremely expressive grimace.

"'Darling Alfred'—'dearest Alfred'—'wicked calumnies'—'wicked lies'—'wicked woman'—to accuse her 'dear husband'! The sooner I left her house the better. So I'm off."

"But not now?"

"This minute!"

For a moment we sat and stared at her. Finally John Cavendish, finding his persuasions of no avail, went off to look up the trains. His wife followed him, murmuring something about persuading Mrs. Inglethorp to think better of it.

As she left the room, Miss Howard's face changed. She leaned toward me eagerly.

"Mr. Hastings, you're honest. I can trust you?"

I was a little startled. She laid her hand on my arm, and sank her voice to a whisper.

"Look after her, Mr. Hastings. My poor Emily. They're a lot of sharks—all of them. Oh, I know what I'm talking about. There isn't one of them that's not hard up and trying to get money out of her. I've protected her as much as I could. Now I'm out of the way, they'll impose upon her."

"Of course, Miss Howard," I said, "I'll do everything I can, but I'm sure you're excited and overwrought."

She interrupted me by slowly shaking her forefinger.

"Young man, trust me. I've lived in the world rather longer than you have. All I ask you is to keep your eyes open. You'll see what I mean."

The throb of the motor came through the open window, and Miss Howard rose and moved to the door. John's voice sounded outside. With her hand on the handle, she turned her head over her shoulder, and beckoned to me.

"Above all, Mr. Hastings, watch that devil—her husband!"

There was no time for more. Miss Howard was swallowed up in an eager chorus of protests and good-byes. The Inglethorps did not appear.

As the motor drove away, Mrs. Cavendish suddenly detached herself from the group, and moved across the drive to the lawn to meet a tall bearded man who had evidently been making for the house. The color rose in her cheeks as she held her hand to him.

"Who is that?" I asked sharply, for instinctively I distrusted the man.

"That's Dr. Bauerstein," said John shortly.

"And who is Dr. Bauerstein?"

"He's staying in the village doing a rest cure, after a bad nervous breakdown. He's a London specialist; a very clever man—one of the greatest living experts on poisons, I believe."

"And he's a great friend of Mary's," put in Cynthia, the irrepressible.

John Cavendish frowned and changed the subject.

"Come for a stroll, Hastings. This has been a most rotten business. She always had a rough tongue, but there is no stauncher friend in England than Evelyn Howard."

He took the path through the plantation, and we walked down to the village through the woods which bordered one side of the estate.

As we passed through one of the gates on our way home again, a pretty young woman of gypsy type coming in the opposite direction bowed and smiled.

"Thats a pretty girl," I remarked appreciatively.

John's face hardened.

"That is Mrs. Raikes."

"The one that Miss Howard—"

"Exactly," said John, with rather unnecessary abruptness.

I thought of the white haired old lady in the big house, and that vivid wicked little face that had just smiled into ours, and a vague chill of foreboding crept over me. I brushed it aside.

"Styles is really a glorious old place," I said to John.

He nodded rather gloomily.

"Yes it's a fine property. It'll be mine some day—should be mine now by rights, if my father had only made a decent will. And then I shouldn't be so dashed hard up as I am now."

"Hard up, are you?"

"My dear Hastings, I don't mind telling you that I'm at my wit's end for money."

"Couldn't your brother help you?"

"Lawrence? He's gone through every penny he ever had, publishing rotten verses in fancy bindings. No, were an impecunious lot. My mother's always been awfully good to us, I must say. That is, up to now. Since her marriage, of course—" he broke off, frowning.

For the first time I felt that, with Evelyn Howard, something indefinable had gone from the atmosphere. Her presence had spelt security. Now that security was removed—and the air seemed rife with suspicion. The sinister face of Dr. Bauerstein recurred to me unpleasantly. A vague suspicion of every one and everything filled my mind. Just for a moment I had a premonition of approaching evil.

CHAPTER 3

I HAD arrived at Styles on the 5th of July. I come now to the events of the 16th and 17th of that month. For the convenience of the reader I will recapitulate the incidents of those days in as exact a manner as possible. They were elicited subsequently at the trial by a process of long and tedious cross-examination.

I received a letter from Evelyn Howard a couple of days after her departure, telling me she was working as a nurse at the big hospital in Middingham, a manufacturing town some 15 miles away, and begging me to let her know if Mrs. Inglethorp should show any wish to be reconciled.

The only fly in the ointment of my peaceful days was Mrs. Cavendish's extraordinary, and, for my part, unaccountable preference for the society of Dr. Bauerstein. What she saw in the man I cannot imagine, but she was always asking him up to the house, and often went off for long expeditions with him. I must confess that I was quite unable to see his attraction.

The 16th of July fell on a Monday. It was a day of turmoil. The famous bazaar had taken place on Saturday, and an entertainment, in connection with the same charity, at which Mrs. Inglethorp was to recite a war poem, was to be held that night.

We were all busy during the morning arranging and decorating the hall in the village where it was to take place. We had a late luncheon and spent the afternoon resting in the garden. I noticed that John's manner was somewhat unusual. He seemed very excited and restless.

After tea, Mrs. Inglethorp went to lie down to rest before her efforts in the evening and I challenged Mary Cavendish to a single at tennis.

About a quarter to seven, Mrs. Inglethorp called to us that we should be late as supper was early that night. We had rather a scramble to get ready in time; and before the meal was over the motor was waiting at the door.

The entertainment was a great success. Mrs. Inglethorp's recitation receiving tremendous applause. There were also some tableaux in which Cynthia took part. She did not return with us, having been asked to a supper party, and to remain the night with some friends who had been acting with her in the tableaux.

The following morning, Mrs. Inglethorp stayed in bed to breakfast, as she was rather overtired; but she appeared in her brisk self about 12:30, and swept Lawrence and myself off to a luncheon party.

"Such a charming invitation from Mrs. Holleston. Lady Tadminster's sister, you know. The Hollestons came over with the Conqueror—one of our oldest families."

Mary had excused herself on the plea of an engagement with Dr. Bauerstein.

We had a pleasant luncheon, and as we drove away Lawrence suggested that we should return by Tadminster, which was barely a mile out of our way, and pay a visit to Cynthia in her dispensary. Mrs. Inglethorp replied that this was an excellent idea, but as she had several letters to write she would drop us there, and we could come back with Cynthia in the pony-trap.

We were detained under suspicion by the hospital porter, until Cynthia appeared to vouch for us, looking very cool and sweet in her long white overall. She took us up to her sanctum, and introduced us to her fellow dispenser, a rather awe-inspiring individual, whom Cynthia cheerily addressed as "Nibs."

"What a lot of bottles!" I exclaimed, as my eye travelled round the small room. "Do you really know what's in them all?"

"Say something original," groaned Cynthia. "Every single person who comes up here says that. We are really thinking of bestowing a prize on the first individual who does not say: 'What a lot of bottles!' And I know the next thing you're going to say is: 'How many people have you poisoned?'"

I pleaded guilty with a laugh.

"If you people only knew how fatally easy it is to poison some one by mistake, you wouldn't joke about it. Come on, let's have tea. We've got all sorts of secret stores in that cupboard. No, Lawrence—that's the pois'n cupboard. The big cupboard—that's right!

We had a very cheery tea, and assisted Cynthia to wash up afterwards. We had just put away the last tea-spoon when a knock came at the door. The countenances of Cynthia and Nibs were suddenly petrified into a stern and forbidding expression.

"Come in," said Cynthia, in a sharp professional tone.

A young and rather scared looking nurse appeared with a bottle which she proffered to Nibs, who waved her towards Cynthia with the somewhat enigmatical remark:

"I'm not really here today."

Cynthia took the bottle and examined it with the severity of a judge.

"This should have been sent up this morning."

"Sister is very sorry. She forgot."

"Sister should read the rules outside the door."

I gathered from the little nurse's expression that there was not the least likelihood of her having the hardihood to retail this message to the dreaded "Sister."

"So now it can't be done until tomorrow," finished Cynthia.

"Don't you think you could possibly let us have it tonight?"

"Well," said Cynthia graciously, "we are very busy, but if we have time it shall be done."

The little nurse withdrew, and Cynthia, promptly took a jar from the shelf, refilled the bottle, and placed it on the table outside the door.

I laughed.

"Discipline must be maintained?"

"Exactly. Come out on our little balcony. You can see all the outside wards there."

I followed Cynthia and her friend and they pointed out the different wards to me. Lawrence remained behind, but after a few moments Cynthia called to him over her shoulder to come and join us. Then she looked at her watch.

"Nothing more to do, Nibs?"

"No."

"All right. Then we can knock up and go."

I had seen Lawrence in quite a different light that afternoon. Compared to John, he was an astounding different person to get to know. He was the opposite of his brother in almost every respect, being unusually shy and unobserved. Yet he had a certain charm of manner, and I fancied that, if one really knew him well, one could have a deep affection for him.

I had always fancied that his manner to Cynthia was rather constrained, and that she on her side was inclined to be shy of him. But they were both, gay enough this afternoon, and chatted together like a couple of children.

As we drove through the village, I remembered that I wanted some stamps, so accordingly we pulled up at the post office.

As I came out again, I caroused into a little man who was just entering. I drew aside and apologized, when suddenly, with a loud exclamation, he clasped me in his arms and kissed me warmly.

"Mon ami Hastings!" he cried. "It is indeed mon ami Hastings!"

"Poirot!" I exclaimed.

I turned to the pony-trap.

"This is a very pleasant meeting for me, Miss Cynthia. This is my old friend, Monsieur Poirot, whom I have not seen for years."

"Oh, we know Monsieur Poirot," said Cynthia gaily. "But I had no idea he was a friend of yours."

"Yes, indeed," said Poirot seriously, "I know Mademoiselle Cynthia. It is by the charity of that good Mrs. Inglethorp that I am here." Then, as I looked at him inquiringly: "Yes, my friend, she had kindly extended hospitality to seven of my country-people who, alas, are refugees from their native land. We Belgians will always remember her with gratitude."

Then, as I looked at him inquiringly: "Yes, my friend, she had kindly extended hospitality to seven of my country-people who, alas, are refugees from their native land. We Belgians will always remember her with gratitude."

Poirot was an extraordinary looking little man. He was hardly more than five feet, four inches, but carried himself with great dignity. His head was exactly the shape of an egg, and he always perched it a little on one side. His moustache was very stiff and military.

The neatness of his attire was almost incredible. I believe a speck of dust would have caused him more pain than a bullet wound. Yet this quaint dandified little man who, I was sorry to see, now limped badly, had been in his time one of the most celebrated members of the Belgian police.

As a detective, his flair had been extraordinary, and he had achieved triumphs by unraveling some of the most baffling cases of the day.

He pointed out to me the little house inhabited by him and his fellow Belgians, and I promised to go and see him at an early date. Then he raised his hat with a flourish to Cynthia, and we drove away.

"He's a dear little man," said Cynthia. "I'd no idea you knew him."

"You've been entertaining a celebrity unawares," I replied.

And, for the rest of the way home, I recited to them the various exploits and triumphs of Hercule Poirot.

We arrived back in a very cheerful mood. As we entered the hall, Mrs. Inglethorp came out of her boudoir. She looked flushed and upset.

"Oh, it's you," she said.

"Is there anything the matter, Aunt Emily?" asked Cynthia.

"Certainly not," said Mrs. Inglethorp sharply. "What should there be?" Then catching sight of Poirot, the parlormaid, going into the dining-room, she called to her to bring some lamps into the boudoir.

"Yes, m'm." The old servant hesitated, then added diffidently: "Don't you think, m'm, you'd better get to bed? You're looking very tired."

"Perhaps you're right, Dorcas—yes—no—not now. I've some letters I must finish by post-time. Have you lighted the fire in my room as I told you?"

"Yes, m'm."

"Then I'll go to bed directly after supper."

She went into the boudoir again, and Cynthia stared after her.

"Goodness gracious! I wonder what's up?" she said to Lawrence.

* * *

CHAPTER 4

LAWRENCE did not seem to have heard her, for without a word he turned on his heel and went out of the house.

I suggested a quick game of tennis before supper and Cynthia agreeing, I ran upstairs to fetch my racquet.

Mrs. Cavendish was coming down the stairs. It may have been my fancy, but she, too, was looking old and distraught.

"Had a good walk with Dr. Bauerstein?" I asked, trying to appear as indifferent as I could.

"I didn't go," she replied abruptly. "Where is Mrs. Inglethorp?"

"In the boudoir."

Her hand clenched itself on the banisters, then she seemed to master herself by some convulsive, and even impossible effort and drew the clothes across the hall to the boudoir, the door of which she shut behind her.

As I was out in the tennis court a few moments later, I had to pass the open boudoir window, and was unable to help overhearing the following scrap of dialogue. Mary Cavendish was speaking in the voice of a woman desperately controlling herself.

"Then you won't show it to me?"

To which Mrs. Inglethorp replied:

"My dear Mary, it has nothing to do with that matter."

"Then show it to me."

"I tell you it is not about you, Mary. It does not concern you in the least."

To which Mary Cavendish replied with a ringing laugh:

"We shall see! I have just as much right as—"

Cynthia and I passed out of hearing.

REAL ESTATE SOLD IN COURT ACTIONS

City and Farm Property Included in Sale Held by Sheriff

Real estate involved in three cases in Common Pleas Court sold at sheriff's sale Saturday afternoon.

A 60-acre tract in Richland Township in the partition suit brought by Aaron A. Goerlich against Katie Watson sold to the Jacoby heirs, including Charles W. Jacoby, J. Wilbur Jacoby, F. Daisy Jacoby and Mary Jacoby Gibbons. The tract, appraised at $3,000, sold for $2,575.

Ten lots in the city sold for $100 in the foreclosure suit brought by the Marion Savings Bank Co. against James B. Bolander. The lots were bought by Mrs. Nona Bolander at $10 each. The appraisal was $60.

Only six of the lots involved in the foreclosure suit of the Advantage Loan & Discount Co. against David A. West were sold. Three were bid in by the loan company at two-thirds of the appraised value of $2,550. Two of the remainder were sold to D. Reed Corr at $133 and $250. The appraised value was $200 and $350 respectively. David A. Terry bought the third at the appraised value of $600.

ELKS GO STRONG IN FIRST TOURNEY FRAY

Wildcats Held to One Hit, but Defeat Kiwanis Nine

By virtue of its 22 to 5 defeat of Scofield Heights the Elks entry in the American Legion amateur baseball tournament which opened Saturday at Lincoln Park loomed as one of the strongest contenders for the Marion title.

The Elks aggregation took advantage of the youthfulness of their opponents making 18 hits good for 22 runs. Price, Findley and Castner hurled for the winners while Stark tossed them for the losers.

Although being held to one hit by Frank, the Wildcats defeated the Kiwanis, 6 to 4. Seven errors at critical moments caused the Kiwanis backed nine to lose. Spanick pitched for the victors.

Errors again proved costly when the Knights of Columbus team was defeated 13 to 9 by the Dodgers. Kelley hurled good ball for the Irish but six errors by his team mates decided the issue. Misly and Klingle allowed six hits to their opponents.

19 CHILDREN ARE EXAMINED AT CLINIC

Dr. J. W. Weiser, city health commissioner, and Dr. E. H. Morgan conducted the pre-school clinic at Forest Lawn school, Saturday. Nineteen children who will start to school in September were examined by the physicians for any physical defects that might be corrected before the opening of school. The final clinic of the series fostered by the various community clubs this spring, will be held at Glenwood school, Tuesday.

300 SCHOOL PUPILS IN CHURCH SERVICE

About 300 children of St. Mary's Parochial School brought to a close the month of May, devoted to special honoring of the Blessed Virgin, with crowning of a statue of the Blessed Virgin, last night at St. Mary's Catholic Church. Miss Mae Hannegan, a senior, presented the crown.

KINSEY DEFEATED

Marion Boy Eliminated in First Round of Meet

John Kinsey, Marion's entry in the Citizen marble championship contests at Columbus Saturday, was eliminated in the first round by Charles Shaw of Coshocton. The local boy failed to win a game.

The tournament was won by Carl Kruckenberg of Lancaster. The victor over the Marion boy was eliminated in the semi-final round by the runner up of the meet.

ARREST FOLLOWS FALL FROM HORSE

Rider of Steed To Be Arraigned on Intoxication Charge

A horse and "cantle mule" proved to be the wrong combination yesterday afternoon for Lloyd Messenger, 219½ N. Main st, according to a report from the sheriff's office, today. After imbibing a little too freely, according to the account given by the sheriff, Messenger took his favorite steed out for a canter about town. All went well until the horseman reached the neighborhood of the postoffice.

Unable to hold his seat the rider slipped to the pavement. He suffered bruises and other minor injuries in the fall, Sheriff James A. Deal arrived shortly after and placed Messenger under arrest on a charge of intoxication. He will be arraigned in Probate Court, Tuesday morning.

SERVICES AT CHURCH ARE WELL ATTENDED

Evangelistic Singers Expected To Arrive Today for Meetings

With large crowds at both morning and night services a two-weeks revival opened yesterday at First Church of Nazarene, 8 State-st.

Rev. G. E. Waddle, pastor of the church, is in charge of the services. He will be assisted by Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Sutton of Bethany, Okla., expected to arrive here today from Grand Rapids, Mich. Mr. and Mrs. Sutton are evangelistic singers, well known particularly in the south.

Meetings will be held at 7:30 o'clock each night except Saturday and at 2 o'clock every afternoon, beginning Tuesday with the service at the home of Mrs. Ellery Davis, 834 Bennett-st.

Last night Reverend Waddle preached on the subject, "Reconciliation", based on the text, Second Corinthians 5:20. Miss Mabel Payne and Charles Grace played a saxophone duet accompanied at the piano by Charles Bowen.

Mrs. James Fies and Mrs. Leonard Shepherd were heard in special vocal numbers at both services. In the morning, preceding a baptismal service, Reverend Waddle preached on the subject, "I answered Prayer," from the text, James 4:3.

MEMORIAL SERVICE HELD HERE SUNDAY

Seven Patriotic Organizations Represented; Program Given at U. B. Church

Seven patriotic organizations were represented at the memorial service yesterday morning at First United Brethren Church. They were Cooper Post, No. 117, Grand Army of the Republic, Ladies of the G. A. R., Cooper Women's Relief Corps, Daughters of Union Veterans, Spanish War Veterans, Betsy Ross Auxiliary and the Boy Scouts.

Col. George B. Christian and Commander Charles Wiley, of Cooper Post, presided for the service. Commander Wiley calling the roll of Civil War Veterans. Marion now has 39 veterans, 10 having died in the past year. The white carnations used in the roll call ceremony, were taken to A. B. Hayes, E. Center-st, who is ill.

Rev. W. H. Howard, pastor of the church, gave the memorial sermon. A similar service is held each year on the Sunday preceding Decoration Day.

"DIG DEEP" ADVICE GIVEN GRADUATES

that the foundation must not be neglected but must be constructed firmly.

"Cultivate thoroughness, acquire the habit of investigation, dig deep," he counseled the senior class members. "During your past four years in high school you have been laying the foundation of the life ahead. You may forget much of the data taught in that time, but you are not likely to lose the habit of investgation, of 'digging down' to get at the causes and underlying principles.

"Most anything is possible for the boy or girl who digs deeps and searches for the rock-bound truth and it is eminently true in the realm of character and morals that mere appearances amount to little and popular averages get one nowhere. Mere respectability as the rule of the populace but you must go deeper than that. The business and professional world demands more than mere respectability and average popular morals. It demands rock-bottom integrity, honor, truth."

EIGHT ARRESTED ON INTOXICATION CHARGES

Four fines of $25 and costs each and four of $10 and costs were administered by Municipal Judge William R. Martin this morning when eight men gathered in by the police over the week-end on intoxication charges were arraigned for hearing. Mickey Shay, Frank Laurence and Charles Miller, making their fourth appearance and Claude Dunbar, making his third appearance, were each fined $25 and costs each. The entire eight were being held at police headquarters today pending payment of the fines.

HUSBAND'S MANNERS AT TABLE CAUSES SUICIDE

Chicago, May 28—Her husband's table manners were blamed today for the suicide of Mrs. Gladys Drew. According to police, Drew and his wife visited a restaurant and quarreled over the husband's alleged improper use of a spoon. On reaching home Mrs. Drew swallowed poison.

TAKING OF MARION MOVIE UNDER WAY

Camera Men Arrive Here Today To Begin Work on Screening Local Picture

Persons appearing on the streets of the city within the next 10 days stand a good chance of being "shot." The shooting however, will be done with a motion picture camera and not with a gun.

The "shooting" will be done by the Russell Motion Picture Corporation, representatives of which arrived in the city today to begin "shooting up the town." The film firm is under contract with the Marion Theater to make a motion picture of Marion. The picture will be shown at the local theater within the near future, it was said today.

Albert Russell, president of the motion picture firm, John Winkler, camera and technical man, and Harry M. Averill, field representative, arrived in the city today to begin work on the film.

Pictures will be taken of all civic clubs, police and fire departments. The film will probably be left in charge of the public library to be shown at future celebrations of a historical nature.

CALL BUSINESS MEN IN MOVIES TRIAL

E. F. Sharpless Again on Trial for Exhibiting Sunday Pictures

Malcolm Strelitz, of the law firm of Guthery, Strelitz & Guthery, were attorneys for Sharpless.

Considerable difficulty was experienced in seating a jury. Twenty-four were called before prosecution and defense attorneys were finally satisfied. Eight stated that they had already formed an opinion in regard to the case and were dismissed by the court. Attorneys on both sides exercised two peremptory objections. After 16 jurors had been called the venire was exhausted and the bailiff was sent out on the street to bring in additional jurors. Seven men and five women compose the jury which was seated at 10 o'clock.

It is believed that the case will go to the jury late this afternoon.

The jury is composed of the following:

J. H. Hanley, Lafluc; Henry Gerrett, Marion, R. D.; Mrs. Harriett Cressap, 502 Gleard-av; Mrs. Alice B. Cahill, 191 Bellevue-av; Mrs. Florence M. Young, 217 St. James-st; Mrs. Laura J. Smith, 221 Blaine-av; K. B. Robins, Morral; William H. Hunt, Dechff; Merle Kennedy, Marion, R. D.; Mrs. Harry Lust, Kenton-pk; Emanuel Reeder, 219 W. Church-st; and J. F. Crissinger, 130 Dix-av.

Crowd Is Smaller

The defense fared slightly better today that a month ago when the case was first heard. Testimony regarding the operation of other places of business on Sunday, barred at the first trial, was admitted to the court records today.

The crowd, which established a record for attendance at a court trial here when the case was first heard, was somewhat smaller today. A few pastors of Marion churches were noted in the audience.

The first trial was said to have resulted in a hung jury with the final vote at seven to five for acquittal.

LINERS ARE HELD IN BAY BY DENSE FOG

Fifteen Incoming Ships Carrying 2,500 Passengers Forced To Cast Anchors

New York, May 28—More than 2,500 passengers on 15 incoming liners today were within figurative hailing distance of their destinations, but the ships were fogbound in the lower bay.

The mist spread a murky curtain at Quarantine that brought pilots to quick decision-anchorage.

The President Garfield of the Dollar Line, was returning with tourists from France. Two Cunarders, the Carmania and the Lancastria from English ports lay at rest near the Garfield.

Other transatlantic ships that were in idleness were the Frederick VIII from Copenhagen; the New York of the Hamburg American Line; the Red Star liner Arabic; the California of the Anchor Line; the Atlantic transport Minnetonka and the Furness Bermuda boat, Port Victoria.

Numerous coastwise craft were reported motionless farther down the bay because of the fog mask.

JOINT SERVICE HONORS DEAD

Kenton Citizens Pay Tribute to War Veterans at Church of Immaculate Conception

Kenton, May 28—Impressive beauty and solemnity marked memorial services in the Church of Immaculate Conception Sunday morning when veterans of all wars and their auxiliaries gathered to pay tribute to the memory of the nation's hero dead.

Hundreds of citizens, filling the large church auditorium to overflowing, joined in the service of tribute and showed their respect and appreciation for those living veterans of American wars.

Rev. H. J. Schumacher, pastor, delivered the memorial address, a tribute to the veterans and a stirring plea for continued love of, and patriotic service to America and its institutions. "What we have today came from men who fought and died for their country and now we must be ever mindful of our duty to our country to preserve its ideals and institutions as a priceless heritage to the oncoming generation," the speaker declared.

Special Music

As the processional, "Patriotic Airs," was played, members of the participating patriotic organization.—Grand Army of the Republic, Spanish War Veterans, American Legion, Relief Corps, Service Star Legion, A. U. S. W. V. and the Ladies' Auxiliary of the American Legion—filed into the church.

A word of welcome by Rev. Schumacher was followed with low mass. The church choir beautifully sang, "Kyrie," "Gloria" and "Benedictus," and "Ava Maria," was given with Hazel Quinn, soloist, accompanied by Mrs. Ray Lingrel, organ, Theodore Dick, cello and Augusten Dick, violin.

While the church quartet sang, "Remember the Dead," the huge audience bowed in silent prayer of remembrance of the dead. Then the congregation sang "The Star Spangled Banner" in tribute to the American flag and "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name" in reverence to the Lord.

BURIED TODAY

Services Are Held This Afternoon for Mrs. Mary E. Chester

Upper Sandusky, May 28—Last rites for Mrs. Mary E. Chester, 84, whose death occurred suddenly Friday night were held at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Lundy, with whom she resided near Sycamore, this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial was made in Benton Cemetery.

Mrs. Chester had been shopping in Bucyrus Friday afternoon with her daughter and granddaughter, Mrs. Fred Lowry, and apparently was in her usual good health. Upon returning home she was stricken while seated at the dinner table and died before medical aid could be summoned.

Her maiden name was Corbin, her birth occurring June 9, 1844. She was twice married, first to Cyronus Heath in 1862. Mr. Heath died in 1867 and in 1870 she married Burgret Chester, whose death occurred in 1888. Four children survive.

RECEPTION HONORS REV. H. E. STAFFORD

Kenton Church of Christ Pastor To Take Charge in Youngstown

Kenton, May 25—Congregations of the Church of Christ and the First Presbyterian Church united Sunday evening in a farewell reception to Rev. H. Erwin Stafford, pastor of the Church of Christ, who leaves this week to take charge of the Hillman Street Church, Youngstown.

Rev. E. V. Relles, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, addressed the reception, lauding the work which has been accomplished during the three-year ministry of Rev. Stafford, while in Kenton.

Music prelude marking the opening of the reception, was played by Miss Flora D. Price, at the organ and Norman Stafford at the piano.

During the morning hour of worship, Rev. Stafford delivered his final sermon, his subject being, "The First Christian Fellowship and It's Message." Included in the music program were the following young people: Naomi Weatherholt, Gretchen Haudenschield, Dorothy Shrenk, Caroline Snodgrass and Rodney Stafford.

Observes Feast Day

Pentecost Sunday, third and last of the great festal days of the church year, was observed yesterday by St. John's Evangelical Church with Holy Communion.

In the afternoon a memorial service in Veterans' Hall was addressed by Rev. W. M. George of Mt. Victory.

June 10, Dr. H. E. Armacost, Delaware, superintendent of the Delaware District Methodist Church, will deliver two sermons in Kenton, from the pulpits of the First M. E. and Epworth M. E. Churches.

KENTON REDS SWAMPED IN OPENING GAME OF SEASON

Kenton, May 28—In its first game of the season Sunday at Lake Idlewild Park, the Kenton Reds club was swamped 21 to 3 by the strong Jumbo semi-pros.

Four hurlers were used by the locals in an effort to stop the slugging Jumboites. Numerous errors were also recorded by Kenton.

With the selection last night of Chick Shelley, LaRue, as playing manager the Reds' line-up will be revamped with players from Lima and Marion being added.

VETERANS ARE HONOR GUESTS

Union Church Services Pay Tribute to Civil War Heroes at Upper Sandusky

Upper Sandusky, May 28—Only a handful of the old Civil War Veterans remained to attend the union service in their honor which were held at the Methodist Church, Sunday morning. But six defenders of the blue took their places at the front of the church, followed by the Woman's Relief Corps, the veterans of Spanish American war and the World War.

Appropriate music for the occasion was sung by a union choir under the direction of Mrs. Frederick Reiser, solo parts were taken by Mrs. Reiser and E. F. Stephens. Scriptures were read by Rev. J. W. Holland and prayers were offered by Rev. S. P. Mauger and Rev. Frederick Croner.

Rev. C. R. Williamson, pastor of the Methodist Church, delivered a splendid and touching sermon on, "Sacred Memories," taking his text from 112 Psalm, verse six, which reads: "And the righteous shall be, everlasting remembrance." Rev. Williamson paid tribute to the honored dead, telling how they were willing for the sake of their country's needs to make the supreme sacrifice. He then brought out the message of the sacrifice as one of the finest of Christian ideals and one which shows the highest spiritual development.

Other Church Services

Receiving of members into the church enrollment occupied the important part of the morning services at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, yesterday. Forty-four members were examined and confirmed by Rev. C. F. Betz. Five persons were given the holy rite of baptism. Anthems were sung by the choir with Miss Hazel Heer at the organ. At night, Rev. Betz preached on, "The Other Comforter and Helper."

Night services at the other churches followed the usual program. At Trinity Reformed Rev. George Good spoke on "Saved — Lost—a Contrast." At the Methodist Church Rev. Williamson talked upon the subject, "The Real and Unreal," and the Presbyterian Rev. Croner continued his historical study of the Bible with the aid of pictures. Rev. N. W. Yager spoke to the Evangelical congregation on "Exalted Privileges of Good Men in a Degenerated World," the fourth of a series upon God's development of the Human Race.

CONTINUE WORK

Workers In Community Chest Drive To Meet Tuesday

Bucyrus, May 28 — The Bucyrus Community Chest campaign workers took rest Saturday after their week of diligent working in which they made $11,000 of the $17,500 needed, and will renew their efforts today to reach the goal.

A meeting will be held this Thursday night and chest directors are confident that by that time the total pledges will have reached the mark.

SUIT DISMISSED

Mt. Gilead, May 28 — The divorce action of Etta Babcock against Chauncey Babcock was dismissed without record at the costs of the plaintiff by a court order Saturday by Judge W. P. Vaughan of the Common Pleas Court. W. M. Kaufman and Benjamin Olds were the attorneys for the plaintiff.

Monnette, a new entry in the Tri County baseball league, won its first game Sunday defeating the Oakland Store of Marion, 3 to 2. The local team was held to three hits.

Behind the airtight hurling of Darnell, Claridon rode to a 6 to 0 victory over Morral. Morral batters nicked Darnell with no degree of success managing to get one safe hit.

CHURCHES HOLD UNION RITES

Bucyrus Congregations Unite for Patriotic Service; To Honor Graduates

Bucyrus, May 28—Bucyrus' few remaining veterans of the Civil War and members of other patriotic organizations were honor guests at the annual Sunday memorial service which was held at the Lincoln Way M. E. Church last night. Veterans of the G. A. R. were furnished transportation to and from the church.

The service opened with the prelude played by Miss Lucille Hertzer, and the singing of "Amerima" followed by a responsive reading and the singing of "Gloria Patri."

Rev. Roy S. Bowers, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, offered prayer. Under the direction of Mrs. C. E. Tuller, the choir sang two special anthems. Rev. Emil I. Klotz, pastor of Lincoln Way Methodist Episcopal Church delivered the sermon. Dr. O. F. Laughbaum read Lincoln's Gettysburg address. Attorney J. D. Sears President of the Memorial Society, made a few remarks.

Rev. J. W. Bowds pronounced the benediction after the singing of "O, Columbia the Gem of the Ocean."

Degree With Sermon

The annual memorial service was designated as a union service by all of the local churches at a meeting of the Ministerial Association and all the Sunday services in all the other church were dispensed with and all congregations with their ministers participated in the union service.

At the evening services of the First Evangelical Church June 10 small testaments will be presented the Twelve Evangelical graduates. It has been the custom of the church to hold a special service in recognition of its graduates and the honored members are, Misses Bernice Stuckey, Luella Zellner, Mildred Zellner, Ruth Hoover, Martha Cook, Elsworth McKinley, John Saffel, Harry Martin, Alfred Park, Ray Wickheiser, Charles Kanode and Floren Cook.

MONEY AND WATCH STOLEN AT BUCYRUS

Three Homes Entered by Thieves Saturday Night; No Clue to Thefts

Bucyrus, May 28—Three Bucyrus homes were broken into Saturday night and a total of $20.15 and a gold watch were stolen.

From the Frank Kerr residence, Plymouth-st, thieves entered a window and took $20. Thieves entered the window of Elmer McAdamas, Plymouth-st, removed the Elgin watch from Mr. McAdam's pocket and departed without taking money or other valuable lying around about. Fifteen cents was taken from the home of Archie Hilkebrand, also residing on Plymouth-st. Authorities have no clue.

ALUMNI MEETS

Washington Township Graduates Meet for Banquet and Program

Iberia, May 28—The eighteenth annual banquet of the Washington Township High School Alumni Association was held in the Community Hall Saturday night. About fifty members and guests were present. About 10 o'clock supper was served by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Sons of Veterans. Mrs. Addie Struthers, honorary member of the association presented a large cake to the graduating class.

At the conclusion of the supper, President L. B. Struthers called the association to order. Mrs. Belle Miller was elected president; Harry Mead, vice president; Avis Garfield, secretary; Mrs. Ethel Ott, treasurer. C. E. Caley presided as toastmaster, and called on former superintendent of schools, who was also a member of the class of 1906, to welcome the class of 1928 to membership the association. Russ Hartman, representing the class, responded to the welcome. Following were short talks by Supt. C. W. Lewis; Charles McClarren, class of 1927; Raymond Miller, president of school board; Ora B. Tracht, principal; E. A. Stoneburner, class of 1912; Mrs. Margaret Forbest Wilson, class of 1905; and Rev. C. M. Wyse.

It was decided at this time to discontinue holding a banquet, and have an alumni reunion next year. It was also decided to allow each member the privilege of inviting one guest, and to allow the graduating class the privilege of inviting their guests.

WORK IS BEGUN ON STEEL WAREHOUSE

Bucyrus Company Begins Erection of Building Near Pennsylvania Spur

Bucyrus, May 28—Construction on a new steel warehouse 250 feet in length and 50 feet wide will begin today at the Shunk Manufacturing Co. The new Shunk warehouse to be located along side the Pennsylvania railroad factory spur track, will enable them to store a great quantity of the firm's products instead of in the factory building.

A new 80-ton steel power press is being installed today and it will be used for the purpose of pressing steel sheets into desired shapes. The press has a power of 680,00 pounds and is almost twice as heavy as the one now in service.

Mt. Gilead, May 28—The Florence Pottery, the largest manufacturing project in Morrow County for many years, will probably be in operation within two months according to a recent report by Grant Hasenott, general manager of the pottery. The pottery will have a total floor space of 15,197 square feet on ground floor. It is expected that between 30 and 40 men will be required on the payroll.

The pottery will manufacture pots and tile. Flower pots for florists will probably be featured, as the huge Dressler kiln which is now near completion, is 150 in length and has a capacity of 722 six-inch flower pots every one and one-half hours. A month's operation, at capacity, would produce 779,760 pots. The pots will be from 2 to 12 inches in diameter and the tile from 4 to 10 inches.

Huge Storeroom

The huge kiln is heated by gas and is operated by electricity. The continuous process method is used in manufacture. A storeroom for 35,000 cubic feet of clay has been recently completed.

The pottery will get its electric current from the nearby high tension line but the installation of a 50 horse-power generator insures operation when the current has been turned off.

The pottery is situated between Mt. Gilead and Edison and is located on the Cleveland and Ohio Central R. R., somewhat removed from the highway. A road one and one-quarter miles long is now under construction to furnish ready access.

It has been roughly estimated that $80,000 and $100,000 was required to finance the pottery. The 112 acres surrounding it have been purchased.

OFFICERS ARREST FOUR IN RAIDS

Couple Pleads Not Guilty When Arraigned Before Upper Sandusky Mayor

Upper Sandusky, May 28—Roy Engleman and Ada Engleman, his wife, pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Mayor S. N. Clark about 10 o'clock Saturday night on a charge of illegal possession of liquor. Both were released after putting up a bond of $1,000 each. Their home was raided early in the evening by Sheriff Harvey Stansbery and deputy Sheriff Raymond Stansbery, Marshal L. E. Scherry and policeman, N. H. Link.

Sheriff Stansbery and his deputy, together with special Deputy F. W. Rossman, raided the home of Jerome Frisch, at Carey, near midnight, Saturday night, where they found a group of nine indulging in a drinking party. Frisch together with Lewis Dragage, of Morral, were lodged in the county jail here, the former on a charge of possession, sale, furnishing and delivering liquor, and the latter on a charge of possession.

Seven gallons of whisky and 15 gallons of beer were found hidden under the stairway.

COUPLE WEDS

Miss Mary Smith and Eugene Sverlein Wed at Upper Sandusky

Upper Sandusky, May 28 — Miss Mary Ruth Smith and Eugene Sverlein were united in marriage Friday morning by Rev. C. F. Letz at his home, N. Sandusky-av. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Norman Armstrong, brother-in-law and sister of the bridegroom.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Smith, of Crawford Township, was very attractive in a gown of white flat crepe, her attendant wearing green flat crepe with harmonizing accessories. Mr. Sverlein is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Sverlein of Tymochtee Township.

Following the ceremony dinner was served at the [illegible] home. They will reside with the bridegroom's parents for the present.

UNION SERVICE FOR VETERANS

Mt. Gilead Churches Unite In Observance of Memorial Day; Annual Picnic

Mt. Gilead, May 28—Last night's religious service was given over to the observance of the Memorial day services when Rev. Daniel Hamill of the First Presbyterian Church preached from the Presbyterian pulpit in a union service of all local churches, in memory of the Civil War Veterans. All local patriotic organizations were represented in a body.

The morning service in the M. E. Church, Rev. Dr. G. M. Reeder, the superintendent of the Old People's Home at Elyria, and a former pastor of this church, officiated in the pulpit. He talked on the quotation, "No Man Liveth Unto Himself." He relates some of his experiences in the Sunday School hour.

Next Sunday night, the Jonathan Club of the Central M. E. Church, of Mansfield, an organization of religious singers will occupy the evening hour in a concert that will be attended by the union congregation of local churches.

"The Temptation of Jesus" was the topic selected by Rev. Daniel Hamill for his morning worship exercises in the First Presbyterian Church.

On the second Sunday in June, the Epworth League of the M. E. Church will take charge of the evening services and present two pageants, "Hanging My Sign," a missionary pageant, and "The Only Day I Have," which has as its essence the manner of keeping the Sabbath. This custom of devoting an evening service to the league before the summer vacation has been annually observed.

Yesterday afternoon, Rev. Daniel Hamill of the Presbyterian Church and Rev. J. C. Smith of the M. E. Church conducted Memorial services in the Chesterville M. E. Church.

On Friday evening of this week the M. E. Church will observe its annual meet with a picnic supper in which the families of the church will take part. The annual reports of the church, including a financial statement, will be given at this time.

SUSTAIN INJURIES IN AUTO COLLISION

Bucyrus Girls Crowded Off Road by Unknown Driver; Machine Burns

Bucyrus, May 28—A Maxwell touring car belonging to Walter Bader, was totally burned yesterday afternoon following a collision. Helen Groves was driving the car and Kathryn Linaway occupant, when another car passing them crowded the Maxwell and forcing it off side and into a telephone pole, cracking the crank case and gasoline tank and lighting it.

Both girls suffered slight injuries and Miss Groves was taken to Monnett Memorial Hospital where minor lacerations were treated.

Authorities learned through Miss Groves the license number of the machine crowding the girls off the road. The occupants of that car did not stop to learn the extent of the injuries or damage.

ATTORNEY ISAIAH

DISTRIBUTE FISH

Black Bass and Rock Bass in Morrow County's Share

Mt. Gilead, May 28—An odd 10,000 fish were brought to Morrow County for distribution Saturday representing Morrow's share of the state hatchery distribution.

There were black bass, rock bass, and catfish in the lot. Some of the bass were close to 2 1-2 pounds in weight and will probably stimulate the interest in fishing here this year.

IBERIA RESIDENTS HONOR VETERANS

None of "Boys in Blue" Left To Attend Memorial Service

Iberia, May 28—The Union Memorial Services were held at Iberia M. E. Church Sunday morning. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Sons of Veterans attended in a body and were assigned the front places, usually reserved for the veterans of the Civil War, which would otherwise have been vacant as there are no longer any of the boys in blue to be present. The church was filled to capacity.

The service opened by the congregation singing the hymn, "Even Me," followed by a prayer by Rev. C. M. Wyse. A male quartet, composed of Chas. McAnall, R. F. Braden, G. E. Kennedy and J. J. Maidens sang, "At the Beautiful Gate," followed by responsive reading.

Rev. Wyse then read the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. Following the offering and announcements the quartet sang, "Native Land, My Native Land." Rev. W. H. Gibson delivered the sermon, "The Heroes of Peace," and offered a prayer at the conclusion of the sermon. The congregation sang the hymn, "God of Our Fathers," followed by a benediction by Rev. Wyse. Just as the benediction was pronounced the word was brought telling of the death of Mrs. Amanda Sitz, widow of a Civil War veteran. She was one of the oldest residents of the village. Rev. Gibson offered a short prayer for the bereaved relatives and friends. The funeral services for Mrs. Sitz will be held at the home of W. M. Hatfield at Galion, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

READS SERVICE

Rev. J. R. Turner Officiates at Wedding of Upper Sandusky Girl

Upper Sandusky, May 28—A wedding of interest was solemnized Saturday morning at 11 o'clock when Rev. Father John R. Turner read the single ring service uniting Miss Salome Retena Reiter, daughter of Attorney and Mrs. F. J. Reiter, N. Fifth-st, and David Charles O'Donnell, son of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Donnell, of Lima. Only the immediate families were present for the ceremony.

Mrs. O'Donnell was graduated from the Upper Sandusky High School with the class of 1919 and from Wooster College in 1925. She has taught in this city and in Troy, Ohio. Mr. O'Donnell also graduated in the same high school class, later receiving an M. A. degree at Ohio State University and in 1927 a Ph. D. degree.

They will reside for the present in Columbus where Mr. O'Donnell is professor of chemistry at the university and in the fall will go to Boston where he will be professor of chemistry in Boston College.

BARK TORNADO THIS YEAR

Mt. Gilead, May 28—David Allen White, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dunn White, and James Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Thompson, left here yesterday for a hiking trip through the east. They will be gone a week.

MASONIC MEET WELL ATTENDED

Mt. Gilead Masons Hosts to One of Largest District Assemblies of Year

Mt. Gilead, May 28—Mt. Gilead was the scene of one of the largest meets of Masonic activities of the year Saturday when the Masters and Wardens Association of the Fifteenth Masonic District met in the local Masonic Lodge Rooms. This was also the largest meeting ever held in the local rooms, as the 200 Masons present represented 13 out of the 17 lodges in the district, and 10 outside the district.

Dr. C. Jensen, a local Mason, is president of the Masters and Wardens Association of the Fifteenth Masonic District. Other officers who were present are: John E. West, of Bellefontaine, vice-president; Frank Little of Marion, secretary; E. C. Webber of West Mansfield, treasurer.

Some of the notables present at the meeting who are Masonic dignitaries of this state were: R. Frank Thomas, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge F. & A. M. of Ohio, and Andrew Lawton, grand marshal of the Grand Lodge F. & A. M. of Ohio Masons, both of Youngstown; Asa Queen, district lecturer of the Fifteenth district, from Marion; E. Tappan Rogers, district lecturer of the Sixteenth district, from Tiffin; Harry Myers, district lecturer of the Fourteenth district, from Columbus, and who is secretary of the Humbolt Lodge of Columbus, the largest Masonic Lodge in Ohio; Fred Lovering, district lecturer of the Nineteenth district, from Fredericktown.

I. B. White, local Mason, gave an address on the Entered Apprentice Degree. This was followed by an address on the Fellowcraft Degree by Dr. Charles Mills, of Marysville. John West, of Bellefontaine, gave an address on the Master Mason Degree.

Guests of Honor

A large basket of beautiful flowers was the present donated to the Masters and Wardens Association by the local Eastern Star Lodge.

A supper was held in the Lotaila Inn at which the officers of the local Masonic Lodge, officers of the Masters and Wardens Association, and grand lodge officers were present. Editor Riddle of the "Ohio Mason" was present to cover the meeting and promised mention of the meeting on the "front page." Another similar meeting will be held in Marysville in September. The annual meeting will be held in Bellefontaine when the Past Masters Degree will be conferred. This meeting will be held in early December.

SPARKS CAUSE FIRE

Myron Harner Home Partially Destroyed in Blaze Sunday Morning

Upper Sandusky, May 28 — Sparks from a kitchen stove are believed to be responsible for a fire which destroyed the rear rooms of the Myron Harner home, two miles north of this city early Sunday morning. Mrs. Harner was awakened about 5:30 o'clock by a crackling noise and upon investigating found the kitchen and dining room in flames. Before the Upper Sandusky fire department could reach the scene, the flames had eaten their way into the living room on the first floor and through the second and third floors above the damaged rooms. The loss, which was not estimated was covered by insurance.

Jim Thorpe Swings Wicked Bat As Eagles Win Contest

INDIAN DRIVES LONG HOMER TO WIN FRAY

World's Greatest Athlete in Substitute Role Breaks into Limelight Again; Oldsmotor Nine Defeated in Hectic Battle, 9 to 8

BY KARL S. McELROY
Sports Editor, The Star

JIM THORPE, America's most famous athlete whose name years ago was featured by all sports writers of the country has again broken into the limelight.

This time the great Indian saved the scalp of the Marion Eagles baseball team at Lincoln Park when, by crashing through with a home run, managed to pull a lost game out of the fire turning the tide of defeat into victory. The victim of his bat was the Oldsmotor nine of Toledo. The final score was 9 to 8.

It was the last of the eighth inning. The Eagles were trailing by an 8 to 6 score. One man was out and two men were on base. Thorpe, who made his first appearance in an Eagle uniform at the game, was sent in as a pinch hitter for Buckland. A mighty roar went up from the bleachers as fans again paid tribute to the man who in days gone by appeared before throngs at Olympic contests.

Fans Are Quiet

Then a hush fell upon the crowds. The Pitcher was preparing to make his delivery. A ball game laid in the balance, a hit meaning one run scored and a home run sending the local team into the lead with only another inning to go.

The ball flashed across the plate. It was a high curve, the ball that is said to have caused Jim's downfall in the majors. Seemingly putting little effort into his swing the big Indian met the ball fair and square with a crash. The sphere went into action sailing over the left field fence in as pretty a home run as has ever been hit in Marion. Two runs across the pan and the Thorpe, panting and perhaps not quite the athlete of past years trotted into home.

Cheered At Plate

It was a great sight as the fans greeted the hero of the game, a role that he has assumed on greater occasions before. The cheers of the fans, welcome music to his ears, no doubt brought back memories of his youth. Those cheers were tragic reminders of the past, of days when he sipped from the sweet cup of victory that is offered to youth but denied to those who have passed into the background.

Thorpe's name is mentioned quite frequently in stories but just as a fleeting memory. Today that great representative of the red race will find his name again appearing in the headlines placing him as the hero of another triumph.

That is the story of the finish of one of the most hectic baseball games that has been played at Lincoln Park in many years. It was just an ordinary contest in which hits were made and plays mussed up. But that ending will go down in history as one of the most successful in the history of sport here.

Marion played a fair brand of ball but seemed unable to hold a commanding lead over the Toledo aggregation. The visitors scored in the second inning. Marion pushed three runs across in the fourth. Toledo scored three in the fifth and one in the seventh. In their half of that inning the Eagles tied the score at five all. A home run, two triples and a double gave the visitors three runs the first of the eighth.

"MY WORD!"

Babe Ruth To Take Up Game of Cricket

Philadelphia, May 28—Babe Ruth, king of the home run hitters, plans to take a crack at the jolly old game of cricket. The burly outfielder of the New York Yankees declares that he will engage a cricket expert in New York to teach him the fine points of the English game, and will tour England in a few years as a cricketeer if he masters the sport.

American League pitchers freely expressed the opinion that if the Babe can successfully transform his home run wallop into a cricket swing, he will make the English stars sit up and take notice.

TRADE SENDS SISLER TO HORNSBY'S TEAM

First Baseman and Heavy Hitter Sold to Boston Braves

Boston, May 28—George H. Sisler, first baseman and batsman extraordinary, reports to the Boston Braves today at Brooklyn, N. Y., having been purchased from the Washington Senators.

Purchase of Sisler was the first deal engineered by Rogers Hornsby as manager of the Tribe. The rajah and Sisler were once rivals in St. Louis when Sisler was a St. Louis Browns star and Hornsby was batting high and far for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Reports that Sisler's eyes were not good and that he had been "slipping" were branded as false by Hornsby.

Sisler will play first base for the Boston National League club. Joe Judge had that berth in Washington and this left Sisler, a $20,000 a year man, in utility work. The salary item was said today to figure in the transfer of Sisler from the American League after 12 years service to the National League. The price paid for Sisler was not announced. In Boston, Sisler will replace Dick Burrus, who, it was said, probably will be traded.

Sisler last year played 145 games, hit for .327 and led the American League in base stealing.

WRESTLER DIES

Flushing, N. Y., May 28—William Johnson, 28, intercollegiate middle weight wrestling champion in 1923 and captain of the Columbia varsity team in that year is dead of pneumonia at his home here. He was preparing for the Olympic trials. Johnson was a member of the United States wrestling team that competed at Paris in 1924.

BOSTON IS RESENTING HORNSBY AS LEADER

Fans Preserve Air of Neutrality Towards New Manager of Braves; Say Jack Slattery Was Never Given Chance To Make Good

By DAVIS J. WALSH

Boston, Mass., May 28—Boston's rather emotional populace is preserving an air of strict neutrality towards Rogers Hornsby and his elevation to the management of the Boston Braves, the third major upheaval in his fortunes within a year. The town in general contents itself with stating that it is not against the young man but, if I am any judge of the statements and counter statements aired in my presence today, it may be more truthfully said that it is far from for him.

From what I was able to gather, the ousting of a guy by the name of Slattery from Boston in favor of a guy by the name of Hornsby from Texas would have enraged the citizens no end and that the very air would be brick red with Irish dominoes, if it wasn't for one restraining factor. Nobody, they say, cares one way or the opposite what the Boston Braves do, if anything. There always are a few irredondables, of course, and these are muttering very darkly in their mustache cups about the "inside story" of Slattery's summary removal. But innuendoes dealing with "inside facts" seem to follow Hornsby's varying fortunes as naturally as the average beef follows a toe and, anyhow, Boston says it isn't interested beyond the fact that it prefers to resent Hornsby rather than like him.

Will Jump on Rogers

The writer, somehow, gained the impression that their smoldering resentment, far from superficial in spite of their expressed lack of interest, will break in a veritable storm upon Hornsby's fighting head if he fails to make the Braves win. Their antagonism, while dormant enough at the moment, seems to be instinctive. I am informed that they hooted Hornsby the very first time he appeared at Braves field in a Boston uniform.

Personally, I think that they might be more justified in showing a need of appreciation for a ball player whose desire to win is exceeded only by his ability to do so—under normaly conditions.

The demonstration against Hornsby was prompted tacitly, it appears, by the fact that he failed to chase a fly ball hit into short right field, his reigning weakness. The real cause of the outbreak, however, is said to have been deeper than this. Even at that early juncture, they professed to know that Slattery's days were numbered and that Hornsby was to be named as his successor as soon as the management could do so with decency.

Never Had Chance

"Slattery never had a chance," was the almost universal comment in Boston today, even among those who profess only an academic interest in the situation. "They convicted him as a failure of five weeks work. In fact, they convicted him before he started. He was all but booted out several days before the opening but the club thought better of it. And the poor ball team they gave him to start with was made worse by illnesses and the fact that the players knew their boss was to go as soon as possible."

The Jack Slattery under discussion happens to have a very strong personal following in Boston. He is a home town boy and as Irish as an order of potatoes, O'Brien. A combination like that simply can't miss in the land of the sacred cod.

There has been some talk of boycott at Braves field but that proposition defeats itself when the lads recollect that they weren't going there with marked regularity, anyhow. No, there will not be any immediate change in the Boston situation. But Hornsby will do very well to start winning, pronto. It will be something of a modern miracle if he does and yet the necessity is almost vital.

For, if he can't win, after superceeding their boy friend, they will tear him down like a condemned building. Hornsby has been in full many a tough spot before and lived to like it. But this is the toughest of all.

CUBS AND REDLEGS OPEN SERIES TODAY

Chicago Can Land in First Place by Defeating Cincy

New York, May 28—The Chicago Cubs can regain first place by beating the league-leading Reds today. The Reds are nobody's set-up, however. They are playing the best ball in the league, having won seven of their last nine starts.

Both of the leaders won yesterday. Carl Mays, Cincinnati's submarine ball expert, whitewashed the Cardinals, 2 to 0. St. Louis dropped back into the second division.

Forty thousand fans saw Sheriff Blake of the Cubs win his fifth straight victory. He held the Pirates to five hits and blanked them 3 to 0. Cliff Heathcote had a perfect day at bat with three hits and drove in two runs.

The Giants jumped to third place by taking two close ones from the Phillies, 5 to 4 and 2 to 1. Ott's single in the eleventh won the opener and Hurst's wild throw in the ninth cost the Phils the nightcap. Benton and Barnes were the winning pitchers.

The Boston Braves won their first game under the Hornsby management, beating Brooklyn 4 to 1. The Braves dropped the second game, 8 to 3. Hendrick and Bissonnette getting homers.

Outside of the Yankees, Chicago is the only American League club that has been playing better than .500. The Sox copped their fourth out of their last six starts by shading Detroit 3 to 2, in a duet between Lyons and Van Gilder. Lyons yielded only five hits.

The best pitching performance of the day was turned in by Hayworth of the Senators, who held the world champion Athletics to a pair of singles by Dykes and won in a romp, 4 to 1. The Yanks hadn't won a game all last week.

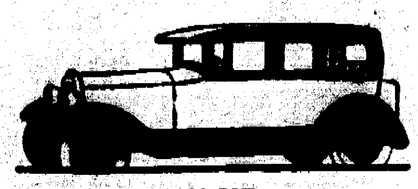
"Tell More—Sell More!"



ARE YOU UP WITH THE TIMES?

A few years ago the man who had a car for sale chalked signs on it and spent good time and money driving around looking for a buyer. And trusting to blind luck to find one.

Modern merchandising methods have changed all that. Now an Ad in the Used Car columns of our Classified Section at a small cost is used. And it takes the message to thousands of readers.

Better way, isn't it?

TODAY'S REVIEW OF GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, May 28—What should this week bring forth in the grain pits?

Hope and sentiment being eliminated from the focus of consideration, the prospect does not present promise of higher prices. Before the week is over the situation may have a different aspect, but at this moment wheat and corn appear to be still susceptible to bearish conditions.

The markets have lost for the time being their bull aura. Later they may get it back. But at present the outlook is too generally favorable to regard seriously crop pessimism in small localities.

Corn has had a big break. In the market sense, that may be considered a reason for an upturn. But even if one comes it may not last. There is nothing at present that seems likely to infect the public or professional trader with bull fever on corn.

Rallies Make Prices

It is quite useless for bulls in corn at present to explain that the new crop will not be available before November, and that therefore its excellent promise has nothing to do with the situation in old corn. In fact, the statement is true, but facts are not what make prices. Beliefs do that.

With the promise for an enormous corn acreage, the possibility of a record crop, the excellent conditions that have prevailed during planting, no speculator can free himself from the sentimental effect these prospects have upon his consideration of prices.

The user of corn naturally will restrict his buying of corn at high prices as much as he can, because he thinks that later he will be able to get all the corn he wants cheaper.

That may be a reason why the spread, now being entered into by so many professionals, may not pan out as well as it looks. [illegible] September over [illegible] the Dominion [illegible] confines the market [illegible]

JOHNSON AND ROUSE SHOW GOOD IN MEET

Lead Prospect to Fifth Place in Class B Event

Columbus, May 28—The brilliant performance of its two entries, Johnson and Rouse, gave Prospect High School fifth place in the Class B division of the state high school track meet, held at Ohio Stadium, Saturday.

Johnson placed in three events, winning first in the shot put and discus and fifth in the javelin throw. Rouse won first place in the broad jump, the only event in which he participated.

The Prospect youths amassed a total score of 16 points, two behind Oberlin High School which took fourth place in the meet. Cincinnati Hartwell scored 31 points to take first place in the competition of the Class B section.

Johnson won the discus event with a throw of 118 feet, 2 inches and the shot put at 47 feet. Rouse jumped 20 feet, 11 1-2 inches to win the broad jump feature.

Both Johnson and Rouse were former school-mates of Pete Anson, of Prospect, Ohio State University high and broad jumping star. Anson, who was 1926 Big Ten broad jump champion and one of the holders of first place in the high jump, is slated as one of the eight most promising Ohio State Olympic candidates.

The [illegible] some of the past secrets of her class of 11 members, of which nine were present; Mrs. Viola Rider of the class of 1900, gave a group of three musical readings; Mrs. Ida Pick of 1905 gave a talk entitled, "A Tribute," also revealing some secrets of this class of eight members, and Elmer Bundley, of the class of 1904 gave several musical numbers.

Prof. Thomas B. Weaver, of Cleveland, former superintendent of Prospect High School, was to have spoken on "Tidbits of Travel," but owing to the lateness of the hour, substituted a short talk, which the graduates, as well as his former pupils, greatly enjoyed.

The reception committee included Mrs. Amy Isler of the class of 1897, Mrs. C. P. Herr and Oscar Gest of 1905, and Paul Smith of 1922.

Among those in attendance from out of town were Rev. Nevin Scheaf, of Wabash, Ind., Mrs. Vida Shuey Rider, of Akron; Mr. and Mrs. Pick of Richwood; Mr. and Mrs. Dale Black, Prof. T. B. Weaver and Miss Evelyn Pace, of Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. William Grube, of Delaware; Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Schaefer and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Maire, of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wasler of Bucyrus; Elmer Bundley, Fred Gest, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Curl, Mrs. Roby Wheat and daughter, Mrs. Lillian Griffith, Mrs. Blanch Houtz and daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Coulston, of Marion.

ATTEND FUNERAL

Mrs. E. G. Venatta, Prospect pb, and Mrs. Howard Ault, of near LaRue, attended the funeral of Miss Nellie Paden, at Kenton, today.

Officials Take Steps to Provide Improved Roads for All of Marion County

Three New Township Projects Authorized; 30 Miles of Township Highway To Be Built This Summer; Plan Surfacing of Entire County System

The program to provide Marion County with 100 per cent improved roads was given a new impetus when three improved roads were allowed in Claridon Township. Decision to build the roads was reached during a conference between the Board of County Commissioners, the Board of Trustees of the township, the county surveyor, Cecil R. Leavens, and interested property owners.

The roads under consideration were the Marion-Williamsport-rd, the Williamsrd, and the Whetstone River-rd. All three are to be constructed of rolled stone macadam. The Marion-Williamsport-rd is two and thirty-three hundredths miles in length. The estimated cost is $9,454.88. The Williamsrd is one and twenty-six hundredths miles in length. The estimated cost is $5,644.20. The Whetstone River-rd is approximately a mile and a half in length. It is estimated to cost $7,731.65.

Claridon Township is one of nine townships in the county which are building roads this summer as a part of the program for improving all roads in the county. Six are building roads entirely within the borders of the townships while three others are cooperating on joint roads.

County Co-operates

The township roads are all built with the co-operation of the county which does the grading, the engineering work and the inspection. Approximately 30 miles of road will be improved in this manner in the county this summer. Besides this work the county has 26 miles of roadway under construction.

If the present rate of road building is continued during the next five years it is estimated by Cecil R. Leavens, county surveyor, that all roads in the county will be improved by the close of 1932.

Besides the nine townships constructing improved roads at present, three others are already making plans for road work for next summer.

The six townships which are building roads within their borders are Tully, Salt Rock, Grand, Big Island, Claridon and Bowling Green. Pleasant, Richland and Waldo Townships are cooperating on the construction of township roads.

On the road program of the county is the maintenance of 450 miles of improved roads. This calls for rebuilding, widening and resurfacing. Work on the resurfacing of approximately 60 miles of county roads is expected to be started this week.

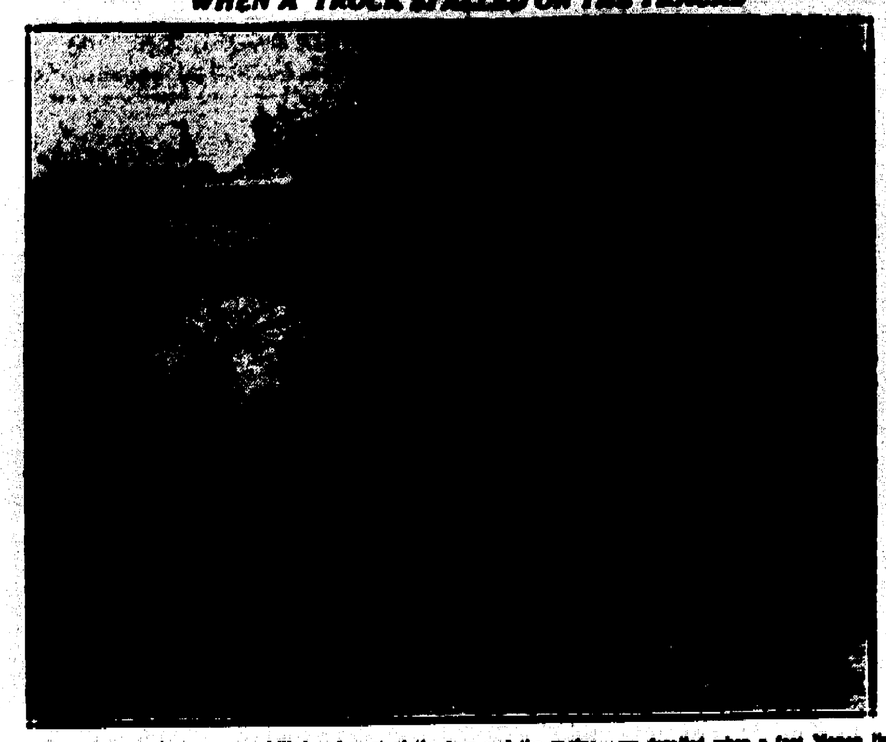
DENTIST COMPOSES OPERA

With music composed by J. J. Sterling Hill, a dentist, and book by A. B. Cox, a well-known humorist, an opera has been produced in Watford, England. Hill thinks out his ideas while working as a dentist during the day, and writes down his music at night, often working until 2 o'clock in the morning. "Howling Success," "should pull well" and "chorus of patients," are some of the remarks made by critics.

WHEN A TRUCK STALLED ON THE TRACKS



Two of the train crew were killed and most of the cars and the engine were derailed when a fast Monon flier hit a stalled truck trailer near St. John, Ind. The engine was overturned into the ditch adjacent to the track. Indiana legislators, homeward bound from a state political convention, were passengers on the train.

SPECIAL PROGRAM PLANNED BY ELKS

Initiation To Take Place Thursday Night; Flag Day Service June 14

A program of special entertainment will follow the regular weekly meeting of Marion Lodge No. 32, B. P. O. Elks, next Thursday night, according to a bulletin issued to the members today by the exalted ruler, R. E. Prettyman. There will be initiation and a turtle soup supper will be served in connection with the closing social session.

Annual Flag Day services of the lodge will be held in the lodge room Thursday night, June 14, with Rev. Earl L. Holliday giving the address. This will be the first service held here since revision of the Elks' Flag Day ritual.

Heroes All! . . . Those Brave Young Americans

Under the very guns of the pirate stronghold, amid that tiny band of impudent American youths—Reckless of Death. For American women had been dishonored, and the United States forced to bow before a pirate nation! Nearer to the pirate ships drew this heroic band—then—occurred the greatest exploit in all naval history!

Boys, girls, mothers, present for the thousandth thrills of the war that established the United States as a great naval power. Live the exciting lives of these youthful heroes of Young America.

Enjoy the thousand and one laughs provided by Wallace Beery, as a rollicking rollie, and George Bancroft as a jolly gunner.

ISSUE YEARBOOKS

Annuals Published by Vernon Heights and Greenwood Schools

Two local grade schools, Vernon Heights Junior High and Greenwood, are this year publishing yearbooks, patterned after the Harding High School annual. Although much smaller and less elaborate, the grade school yearbooks contains accounts of school activities and news in much the same fashion as the High School book. The Greenwood annual, which numbers about 30 pages, is entitled "Students Noise." Vernon's annual, the third to be published by the school, contains about 50 pages and is being brought out under direction of Miss Una Ackley.

PICNIC AT MARTEL

Social Gathering Given as Closing Event of School Year

Martel, May 26.—A picnic dinner was held at the Martel school, Friday, ending the school program for this year.

During the afternoon the following program was given: invocation by Rev. W. H. Dickson; vocal solo, "Over the Meadow", by Mrs. Edith Wilkins; vocal solo, "Bells of St. Mary", by Russel Baldinger; recitation, "Leon", by Harold Burkhart; clarinet solo, by Russel Baldinger; talk by Rev. W. H Gibson.

After the program officers of Parent Teachers Association for the following year were elected, as follows: president, Mrs. Alma Downs; vice president, H. W. Rodeck; second vice president, R. E. Riddle; secretary, Mrs. R. E Riddle, and treasurer, Miss Ruth Bell Auman. Installation of officers was in charge of Mrs. Anna Lyon.

If you can get a lot of fun out of your mind, you know how to live in expensively.

BUILDING PERMITS REGISTER INCREASE

Construction Work Estimated at $7,385 Listed Last Week

With 13 building permits providing for the construction work estimated at $7,385 issued last week, building activities in Marion made a sharp gain over the preceding week when permits totaled $1,325.

Permits for two dwellings for $3,000 each taken out by C. P. Schaffner helped swell the total for last week. There were also nine permits for garages at an estimated value of $1,085, one for remodeling a dwelling at a cost of $300 and one for a porch for $80.

While unaccompanied by any spectacular display building activities in the city are showing slow but satisfactory gains, building supply men and contractors say. A number of dwellings for which permits were taken out previous to functioning of the new permit fee ordinance are now under course of construction, although few permits for dwellings are now being issued.

Construction work on the building to be occupied by the Cussins & Fearn Co., of Columbus, on E. Center st, is progressing rapidly. The steel rafters and joists have been erected and it is expected the work of laying the sidewalls will be started within a short time.

STATE INSPECTORS FINISH WORK HERE

Fire Marshal's Agents Bring Cleanup Week Survey to Close

Inspectors from the office of the state fire marshal who completed an inspection here last week in conjunction with the observance of clean up week reported to Fire Chief McFarland that conditions were found to be very satisfactory with the exception of a few business places where no effort was being made to observe fire prevention rules.

The visit of the inspectors and holding of the tin can parade which resulted in the collection of more than 10,000 cans, were outstanding features of the cleanup week campaign. So satisfactory were both that it is probable they will be made a permanent part of the annual cleanup program.

By reason of the daily service of the city garbage collection department in the collection of rubbish, the city actually played little part in the cleanup campaign. No general collection of rubbish, aside from the regular service, was made by the department, although a truck was provided to answer special cleanup week calls.

IN HONOR LIST

Marion Student Voted into O. S. U. Engineering Fraternity

Columbus, May 26.—One of the 12 junior engineering students elected to Tau Beta Pi, honorary engineering fraternity at Ohio State University, last week, was Donald T. Johnstone of Marion.

Election to Tau Beta Pi is an honorary achievement. The purpose of the fraternity is to confer honor on the students at Ohio State who have attained high scholastic standing and who give promise of success in the field of engineering. Formal initiation of the new members will be held Monday night, May 26.

Johnstone is affiliated with the Triangle engineering fraternity and Tau Beta Pi, honorary engineering fraternity. He is secretary of Pi Delta Epsilon, journalistic fraternity and editor-elect of the Ohio State Engineer magazine. He is also a representative on the Engineers' Council.

BOTANY DISPLAY

Work of Vernon Heights Students Makes Interesting Subject

Work of the ninth grade students of Science at Vernon Heights Junior High School for the last six weeks, is being ably displayed in an exhibit at the school at the present time. The display includes such botanical specimens as flowers, leaves and barks, representing six weeks' study of botany. All the specimens were gathered and mounted by the students under direction of their teacher, Alwyn Crane.

Public Opinion and Regulation

STEADY improvement is seen in the relations between the public and the Carriers. The sentiment of the people as a whole appears friendly and appreciative.

They are glad to acclaim the Railroads for the unprecedented service being rendered.

When the roads were returned to their owners after war-time government operation, a period of intensive improvement of plant and equipment immediately began. By the expenditures of billions of dollars and the inauguration of undreamed of efficiencies and economies in operation, America's transportation system has reached a scale of perfection never attained in the history of the world.

The public has noted these facts, and its attitude has become one of sympathetic interest and understanding.

It is hoped that this also soon may be said of the spirit of the regulatory bodies.

In no single year have the Carriers been permitted to earn what the Interstate Commerce Commission has set as a fair return on their investment.

There is little legislative encouragement for railway managements to give the country the high quality of service it demands at rates compatible with such service.

Until regulation becomes as helpful as public opinion has become, the Railroads will be seriously retarded in their efforts to build for the future of a Greater America.

W. J. Harahan, President.

FEAR BANDIT GANG HAS MADE GETAWAY

Search for Slayers Centers Along Kansas-Colorado State Line

Lamar, Colo., May 28—Search for the four bandits who robbed the First National Bank of this city, leaving a trail of murder in their wake, centered today along the southern Kansas-Colorado state line. Leaders of the posse expressed fears, however, that the quartet of desperadoes had eluded their net.

The casualty list to date stands at three known dead, two wounded and one missing. A. M. Parrish, president of the looted bank, and his son, John Parrish, cashier, were killed outright during the holdup. Dr. W. W. Winegar of Dighton, Kans., was slain, presumably by the bandits, after being lured from his home to attend one of the wounded desperadoes.

The fate of L. A. Kessinger, bank teller, who was abducted by the bandits, is still unknown. It is believed he has either been killed or is being held as a "pawn" through whom the bandits hope to negotiate for their lives and assurance of a fair trial if they are cornered by the posse.

Reports from Hill City, Kans., state that two men from that place were shot and seriously wounded when a sheriff's posse mistook them for the bandits. This incident reflects the hair-trigger tension throughout the district. Undoubtedly the bandits, when found, will be shot on sight.

The greatest manhunt in the history of the west has gathered momentum each hour since the daring bank robbery of last Wednesday. Virtually every male resident within a hundred miles of the Kansas-Colorado state line has taken up arms and joined one of a dozen army-like posses scouring the district.

NOMINATE FOSTER

Former I. W. W. Leader Backed for President by Workers' Party

New York, May 28—William Z. Foster, former I. W. W. leader and organizer of the steel strike of 1918, has been nominated for president of the United States by the national convention of the Workers (Communist) Party, attended by more than 3,000 at the Central Opera House here.

Benjamin Gitlow, who was sent to jail in 1919 for violation of the criminal syndicalist law and pardoned by Governor Smith in 1925, is the candidate for vice president.

PROSPECT SCHOOLS CLOSE YEAR'S WORK

Prospect, May 28—Prospect schools closed Friday with the annual picnic at the noon hour. The pupils assembled at 10:30 o'clock when they received their grade cards and booster certificates. In the afternoon games and contests were enjoyed.

CROWN MAY QUEEN

Program Takes Place at School Auditorium in Agosta

Agosta, May 28—One of the most picturesque events ever held in the school here was witnessed by a large crowd Thursday in the school auditorium when Miss Ruth Drake was crowned Queen of the May. The ceremony was in charge of Miss Isoah Artz.

Little Miss Esther Porter, niece of the May Queen, was flower girl and little Billy Johnson was crown bearer. The attendants were Misses Marie Blunk, Laura Betty Elsile, Frances Imbody, Ferne Wise, Cartha Dutton and Golda Kinsler.

Events given by each room included drills, songs and the winding of the May-pole. The drill given by the seventh and eighth grades was awarded first prize by the Queen.

FIGHT OVER AIR

Congressional Action in Army-Navy Argument May Be Coming

Washington, May 28—Congressional intervention in the row between the Army and Navy over control of key points of the nation's aerial defense in time of war may be voted by the House today.

Representative Tilson of Connecticut, Republican leader, is sponsoring a resolution for an exhaustive investigation of the dispute and recommendations for congressional action.

Backers of a program for unification of the dispute and recommendations for air defense are supporting the proposal.

Both Army and Navy chiefs are fighting the investigation in the hope that a division of the aviation duties of both branches can be worked out satisfactorily.

Don't think that because you can fool some people that others can't fool you.

Have you a gift to buy in June?

Most everybody has at least one friend who is to be married in June. That means that there will be a gift to buy.

We have a suggestion to offer—one that we believe you will agree is a sensible one.

Do not buy anything that is not practical or useful. Do not buy anything that will be tucked away in a closet and soon forgotten. Do not buy anything that BOTH bride and groom are not interested in.

Is it not best to buy something for the new HOME? Something that will give comfort and beautify and help produce the right environment in the new home will surely prove acceptable. Buy something that will prove a daily and lasting reminder of the good taste and good judgment of the giver.

Beautiful furniture pieces can now be bought from a few dollars up. There are hundreds of such gifts to select from. And your credit is good, if you wish credit. Welcome to look through.

Is Praising This Konjola Since It Banished Catarrh

New Medicine Proved a Real Blessing To This Steubenville Citizen

MR. L. K. GRAFTON

"The way Konjola went to the scene of my health troubles was really surprising," said Mr. L. K. Grafton, 1117 Center Avenue, Wellsburg, Ohio.

"For three years I suffered from catarrh. I kept going down in weight and strength. I could only breathe through my mouth as the air passage in my nose was stopped up. There was a constant dripping of poisonous mucous into my throat and my head filled with a roaring and buzzing noise. Finally rheumatism developed in my limbs, causing them to be sore and stiff. There were many days when I could not walk. I was so rundown that I felt my case was hopeless.

"I decided to try Konjola when I read about it in the papers and this medicine proved a God send to me. In a very short time I noticed the mucous drying up and then it completely disappeared and the roaring and buzzing noises vanished. Now I can hardly realize I ever suffered from that ailment. Finally the rheumatism gradually went away and all the aches and pains left my limbs, so that I am never bothered by that disease. I shall always recommend and indorse Konjola to others who are suffering."

Konjola is different than any other known remedy in this section. It contains twenty-two juices extracted from natural plants which invigorate the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, to a more healthy action. The effect of Konjola on the entire system brings amazing relief in cases of suffering that had been going on for years. At the same time many weak and rundown systems have been restored to a new state of health through this compound. Such a vast number of men and women in this city have told of their experience with this new medical product until now Konjola is the most highly indorsed medicine that is known in this vicinity.

Konjola is strongly recommended here in Marion at Strimp & Smith Pharmacy, and is also being sold by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this section—Adv.

City of Milan Balked by Ice Floes; Italia's Fate Is Mystery

the pope who presented them with a wooden cross which was dropped upon the ice at the pole.

Special prayers for the safety of the exploration crew were said in some of the Roman churches.

A report from the United States that a radiogram had been picked up at San Francisco from the Italia furnished ground for hope. It was considered strange, however, that only one station should receive the report.

Asks for Aid

Pope Pius XI, King Victor Emmanuel and Premier Mussolini are all keeping in closest touch with the situation. As soon as he learned that the Italia was overdue at King's Bay, Spitzbergen, Premier Mussolini asked both Norway and Soviet Russia to lend aid.

There were 17 persons in the dirigible in addition to General Nobile. The fateful voyage started on Wednesday when the expedition set out to fly over the North Pole. This object was accomplished and radiograms were sent out from the balloon to King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, Premier Mussolini of Italy, and the pope while the ship was cruising over the top of the world.

FRISCO GETS WORD

Experts and Amateur Operators Keep Constant Vi-

San Francisco, May 28—Three expert operators of the Radio Corporation of America, as well as several amateur operators were keeping a constant vigil here today on short wave lengths, ranging from 30 to 40 meters, in the hope that additional signals may be intercepted that will afford some clew to the location of General Nobile's missing dirigible Italia.

The trio of experienced radio men were assigned to the task of concentrating on the 30 to 40 meter range as the result of a distress call, picked up early yesterday by Radio Corporation and amateur operators here.

Repeated over a period of some two hours, the message, in substance read:

"Dirigible Italia of General Nobile in distress. Supplied with short wave length 30.33 radio. (Signed) Dirigible Italia.

Gen. Umberto Nobile."

The location of the approximate point, where the call originated or was relayed, had not been ascertained early today and all efforts to communicate with the sender proved futile. This, coupled with the fact that the call was received in somewhat garbled form with several words misspelled, led experts of the Radio Corporation to discard the earlier theory that it might have been broadcast by an amateur station in northern Siberia and to express the opinion that the message was transmitted directly from the lost dirigible.

Believed Delayed

On the other hand, Charles E. Blalack, an amateur operator who intercepted the call, declared that, in his opinion, the signals were broadcast by an amateur in Siberia in the vicinity of Vladivostok.

Operators at the naval radio station here, though failing to intercept any signals from the polar regions, nevertheless maintained an alert lookout on the short wave length range.

That desperate efforts to reach the outside world are being made by the operator aboard the exploration balloon, was indicated by Radio Corporation operators and amateurs, who picked up the distress call, when they revealed today that the message was received in at least three languages.

Blalack reported that he received the repeated distress call in English, French and Italian. Radio corporation operators stated that faint signals indicated that the call was also being repeated in Norwegian.

Wave Length Varies

The wave length also varied from time to time, indicating the Italia's operator was transmitting on lengths, running from one limit to the other of his equipment, which ordinarily sends on a 30.33 meter length wave.

Blalack's belief that the call originated in northern Siberia, where, he said, it was probably relayed by an amateur station, was supported by his report that the message was preceded by the letters AS, which designates stations in Siberia.

This theory, however, was contradicted by Radio Corporation operators, who stated that, if the message had been relayed, its reception would have been clearer and several errors in the spelling of English words might have been corrected. They also pointed to the failure of their efforts to communicate with the sender of the call as an indication that the receiving apparatus of the Italia is impaired, while the transmitting equipment is probably in order.

PRESENT PROGRAM

Annual Meeting of Agosta Alumni Association Held Banquet

Agosta, May 28—Covers were placed for about 75 members and guests at the annual meeting of the Agosta High School alumni, held Saturday night in the basement of the Epworth M. E. Church. Initiation of the graduating class and a business session were held in the auditorium of the school building, preceding the banquet.

William Burley, of Marion, president of the organization, presided and the initiatory work was put on by Richard Rankins, chairman. Mildred Schmidt, and John Clark. Mrs. Fanny Benson, Marion, entertained with two piano numbers and Miss Helen Arts contributed two vocal numbers. A violin number presented by Miss Clark, also was an enjoyable number on the program. Letters were read by Mr. Burley from Rev. F. W. Stoll, former superintendent of the school, and Miss LaVon Carey, member of the alumni.

During the business session Miss Edna Dutton, Marion, was elected president; Milford Schmidt, student at Ohio State University, vice president, and Miss Ruby Williams, Agosta, and Cecil Jones, Marion, were reelected secretary and treasurer.

Talks were given by John Luvisi, Mrs. Fanny Benson, William Burley Lewis Reardon and John Miller, Marion; Superintendent and Mrs. Jay Ellis, Mrs. E. R. Prettyman, Mrs. Edna Flowers, Agosta; Milford Schmidt, John Clark, Ohio State University; Mrs. Don Clements, Richard Bobleur, LaRue, and Kenneth Kinsler, Agosta.

Members of the graduating class were Miss Ruth Drake, Miss Clarabel Smith, Miss LaVina Hecker, Robert Rush, Paul Houk and Kenneth Kinsler. Representatives from every class were in attendance with a full attendance of members of the class of 1927.

Spring flowers and streamers of the graduating class colors arranged an attractive color note for the banquet tables.

BENJAMIN DRAKE INJURED IN FIGHT

Colored Man Tells Police of Encounter with Italian Near Kenton-av Today

Bleeding profusely from several cuts on the back of the head and on the right hand, Benjamin Drake, negro, was found by Patrolman John Wren wandering in the vicinity of Harkingst shortly before noon today after a telephone call had been received by police from the Union station reporting that an injured man had been at the depot.

Drake was taken to police headquarters and later to the City hospital, where physicians say his wounds are not serious.

Questioned at police headquarters, Drake, who has been employed at the new Palace theater, on W. Center-st, refused to divulge any details regarding the source of his wounds, other than to say that he had a fight with an Italian and the latter had cut him with a razor. He told the police the Italian had been as much his as the other fellow's and he did not care to have him arrested. It is probable that if he can be induced to divulge the name of his assailant, the man will be placed under arrest, police said.

tion with the case was a 66-year-old Cleveland man who gave himself up voluntarily Saturday when he learned he was wanted. Subsequent investigation showed this man left Struthers, Ohio, near here, April 28, and said a Ford roadster April 27. Ever since the search for the girl began, May 18, a Ford roadster had been the center of the police hunt.

In all 10 men have been arrested, all of whom owned roadsters answering the description of the one said to have been used in the girl's abduction.

The body of Beatrice who had been missing from her Youngstown home for two weeks was found by Melvin and Robert Lippiatt, 13 and 15, respectively, sons of J. R. Lippiatt, a farmer, as they were coming after cows.

The older Lippiatt told police he saw a car stop near the wooded ravine Friday night. The automobile, he said, contained two persons but he did not know whether one was a child.

The dead girl's clothing was torn and scattered, some of it several feet from where the body was found, it was said.

The girl's captor stopped the car at the side of the road and carried her to the ravine, and after a struggle had left her there to die, was the belief of Deputy Sheriff Lawrence Kindervater of Columbiana County.

The brown fur lined coat belonging to Beatrice was found half way between the road and ravine. Nearer to the ravine the child's shoes were discovered together with some of her clothes. The shoes were clear of mud indicating, Deputy Kindervater said, that the child had not wandered to the lonely spot.

Kindervater explained that the scattered clothing showed that Beatrice had struggled with her assailant on the edge of the wooded ravine. She had been dead more than 48 hours, he declared.

Beatrice disappeared from in front of the Rosenbaum home, Youngstown, early May 14. Neighbors said they saw Mr. and Mrs. Max B. Rosenbaum's daughter leave in an automobile driven by an unidentified man, still sought as the kidnaper.

Mysterious clews from Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York extended the search for Beatrice over a radius of 100 miles.

Hundreds of Youngstown citizens and Boy Scouts were enlisted in the search for the missing child and her alleged kidnaper during the first few days after she disappeared. Rewards totaling $1,275 were posted for Beatrice's return. The brothers of Max Rosenbaum, wealthy Youngstown merchants and Cleveland relatives, contributed to the reward.

Lakes in the vicinity of Youngstown were dragged, but there was no trace of the child until yesterday.

ELECTION FIGHT ON BEFORE COMMITTEE

Pinchot Charges Machines with "Cheating and Vote Stealing"

Washington, May 28—The Vare machine in Philadelphia and the Mellon machine in Pittsburgh were guilty of "cheating and vote stealing" at every election in Pennsylvania since 1922, former Gov. Gifford Pinchot testified today at a hearing by the Senate Elections Committee on the contest of William B. Wilson, Democrat, to unseat Senator-elect William S. Vare, Republican of Pennsylvania.

Pinchot said his charges of fraud were based on what he was told by election officials, what he read in newspapers and "my general knowledge of election conditions in Pennsylvania." His testimony frequently provoked arguments between Roland S. Morrisey, counsel for Wilson, and Francis Shunk Brown, Vare attorney. Scores of objections, raised by Brown, were sustained by the committee.

TAXI DRIVER SLAIN

Used by Bandits Who Robbed Inn as Shield

New York, May 28 — Used as a shield by six bandits who raided the Actors' Inn, an all-night cafe, at No. 31 Ithaca, early today, one taxi driver was shot down and killed and two others seriously wounded in the confused fight which followed the bandits' safe escape.

The six gunmen looted the sixty patrons of the cafe, the manager and the help of money and jewelry worth between $15,000 and $20,000.

Louis Minken, 55, Brooklyn, one of the taxi men, was shot through the breast by Patrolman Victor Hurta of the East Fifth Street Station as he attempted to escape from the cafe and from the wrath of the patrons and waiters, who mistook the drivers for members of the bandit gang. He died Bellevue Hospital an hour later.

through a fence at the side of the road. S. A. Ranck of Sycamore, who witnessed the crash, said that young Stalter appeared to have lost control of his machine while traveling at a high rate of speed.

Ranck, with the aid of Earl Alford, also of Sycamore, extricated Stalter from beneath the machine but found that life was extinct.

Services Tuesday

The body was taken to Sycamore in Staum's ambulance and later was removed to the Stalter home, where funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Services at the home will be followed by rites at the Bellevernon Evangelical church at 2:30 o'clock.

Stalter, it was reported, was returning to his home after having been a Sunday dinner guest with his parents and a number of relatives at the home of his uncle, Horace Wood, at Sycamore.

The accident in which the four Kenton residents figured occurred about midnight Saturday when their automobile skidded off the Forest pk at a sharp curve six miles north of Kenton and overturned in the ditch.

The four were returning from Forest, where the girls had attended a movie. They were riding in the one-seated roadster which skidded, according to reports, on loose stone as the driver, Mrs. Ambacker, attempted to slow down the machine to turn the curve.

Smith, a Freshman in the Kenton High school, was sitting on the lap of Holycross and was asleep with his head resting in his hands when the car turned in the road as the brakes were applied and lurched toward the ditch, turning over.

The party was hurled through the top into a huddled heap at the bottom of the ditch, Mrs. Columber said.

"Only the sides of the ditch which supported the car prevented it from crushing us all," she added.

It is thought that young Smith's neck was broken as he was jammed against the crossrod in the hood of the auto breaking it.

Motorists Give Aid

Believing that Smith was still living, Mrs. Columber today told how she and the Holycross boy ministered to him and worked over him until aid from passing motorists arrived. Mrs. Ambacker refused any attention or aid until everything possible had been done for her brother.

Passing motorists aided the victims and called the Brindley ambulance. Sheriff John W. Crooks and Deputy Waldo Handenschield were also called.

According to Mrs. Columber, her cousins and Mr. Holycross, a close friend of the Smith boy, had left Kenton earlier in the evening for a ride and had gone to Forest where the two girls enjoyed a movie while the boys remained in the car.

The crash victim was the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Smith of Kenton. He was born March 30, 1910, in this city, having lived here all his life. There are surviving, in addition to the parents, four sisters, Mrs. Ira Musgrave, Mrs. Homer Roby, Mrs. Ralph Berry and Mrs. Peter Ambacker.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from Epworth Methodist Episcopal Church in charge of Rev. D. Earl Rhoads, Interment will be in Grove Cemetery.

George Wood Stalter, victim of the Sunday night accident, was a son of A. A. and Elma Wood Stalter. He was born two miles southwest of Bellevernon, Nov. 20, 1906, and had spent his entire life in Wyandot County. He attended the Sycamore schools, graduating in 1926, surviving him, besides his parents, are three sisters, Mrs. Paul Walters, of near Sycamore, Mrs. Ralph Schreiber, of Columbus and Miss Eunice at home. A sister, Helen, died suddenly in 1925, a short time before her intended graduation from Bowling Green College.

Since his graduation he had remained at home, helping his father with the farming. He was a member of the Bellevernon Evangelical Church.

Radicals are in control of the Wisconsin Republican state central committee and succeeded in ruling as out of order a resolution which would have pledged the state committee to support the nominee and platform of the national Republican convention. Why should an organization like that be permitted to label itself Republican, and why should radicals barring the action proposed be permitted to take part in the counsels of the national Republican party?

Trend to Better Reading Material.

We have the authority of the very ably-conducted Christian Science Monitor for the statement that there are growing indications that the reading of light fiction is on the wane in England; that, in place of the light novel, the public is showing an increased demand for more serious books; that public libraries in London as well as in the English provinces agree that patrons of their libraries are evincing a higher taste in literature and that "best sellers" do not pull as strongly as they did shortly after the World war. It was the consensus of their opinion that the public is not only reading more, but is also reading more worthwhile books, especially technical, educational and historical works. One librarian who is in charge of one of the greatest public libraries in Great Britain, reported that so great had been the change worked in the last year or two that last year's figures showed that the demand for works of fiction exceeded the non-fiction demand by only ten per cent.

In the absence of other data, this trend to more serious literature might be taken as limited to England, but reports from a number of the great cities of our land show the same trend over here. More than that, these same American cities report that there is a growing demand on the part of readers of fiction for fiction of a higher class than that which apparently reached the zenith of its popularity a few years ago.

In line with this trend, there is said to be a falling-off in the demand for filthy magazines. The sex stuff hasn't the appeal it once had. The reading public, it seems, is surfeited with the unclean, the vile and the vicious and is seeking something purer and better. Dealers report that the sales of a number of the most objectionable magazines have been cut in half and that the demand for others given to the salacious is dwindling.

Let us hope that the present trend is one of permanency and that it will steadily develop. The reading world has wallowed in printed and pictured filth long enough. It is time it got back to cleanness and decency.

Let's Think a Bit Before Acting.

The average lessor of a property would not think of signing away the use of it for a term of years without inserting in the lease a clause which would require the lessee to leave the property, upon the termination of the lease, in as good a shape as it was at the time of the execution of the undertaking, the customary wear and tear excepted. Certainly no good business man would think of entering into any such an undertaking in writing without a provision of this kind.

It has been brought home to us recently that city councils are not so careful in looking after the rights of the municipalities they represent. They give away certain rights to corporations, firms or individuals, seemingly without consideration of eventualities of the future.

By way of illustration, the Columbus, Delaware and Marion Electric company is soon to abandon the operation of its cars over all our streets on which it has trackage save those over which interurban cars are run. Upon announcement of its intention, the provisions of the franchise soon to expire were looked up and it was found that it contained no provision for the removal of the tracks by the company. Were the tracks over the streets over which service is to be abandoned in good condition, it would be a comparatively simple matter to put them into shape, but the rights-of-way soon to be surrendered are in miserable shape, and if we are to judge by the attitude taken by the company in our sister city of Delaware, the removal of the tracks and the putting of the streets into shape will be held by it to be none of its concern.

It was assumed by some that the company could be forced to correct the condition of the rights-of-way in question by holding up its franchise for the operation of interurban cars over the streets of the city, but those so assuming were forgetful of the fact that cities have permitted a lot of laws to be passed, under the guise of reforms, which have taken away from them many of their rights, one of which is to control the use of their streets, once a franchise has been executed permitting the use of them by a common carrier; that, a franchise once given, the state public utilities commission and not the city is in control; that what was once home rule in a city has become very largely a thing of the past.

Under such conditions as now obtain, the utmost care should be exercised in granting franchises, which, once granted, lodges rights which should be those of cities with a commission of the state. We learn, but, unfortunately our knowledge too often comes too late. Our lack of knowledge in the past has caused the people of Marion a number of hardships. In the future, let us look ahead and consider a bit before giving our rights away.

The big synthetic gas plant being erected by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey to produce gasolene by the method followed by the Leun plant in Germany will be ready to begin operation some time the coming summer and is expected ultimately to reduce the price of gas. We true artistocrats of the land might just as well as not give up the fight to enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

A Volume of Ohio Views.

Incident to "Know Ohio" week, which ended last Saturday, an appeal to all camera hunters was sent out from Columbus asking for photographs of beauty or historical spots which they may have taken for use in a mammoth collection of such views to be published by the state educational department with the aid of the officers of the newly-organized Know Ohio league.

All such views should be addressed to C. A. Aughinbaugh, supervisor of visual instruction, Ohio department of education, 233 south High street, Columbus, Ohio, with a description of the location written upon the back of each photo and also the name of the one taking it, as the department plans to give credit for each and every scene published.

The volume, which will be published by the state and probably entitled "Beautiful Ohio," should prove something of a treasure to all who are enthusiastic over the natural beauty spots of the state. Every photographer in the state, whether professional or amateur—and often it is the latter who show the most artistry alike in selections and lightings—should appreciate the fact that it will be something of an honor to have one or more views in such a scenic portfolio.

There are many beauty spots and some of high historical interest in this and adjoining counties. It would be something of a misfortune were this forthcoming volume to be issued without photographic representation of some of them, though the appeal sent out by the "Know Ohio" league does not, of course, restrict the contributors to scenes taken in the vicinity of their home county.

From Algiers comes the story of the death of a boy who was killed by an eagle, when he climbed up a cliff and attempted to rob its nest. Was it a case of justifiable homicide? Let the reader write his or her own ticket.

Statistics were offered at a recent meeting of the New York State Medical society showing that, on the average, 2,000,000 people are ill in the United States every day. Assuming that the average worth of their services is five dollars, that means a bill of $3,650,000,000 annually for time lost through sickness alone.

Congressman Cohen, of New York, has introduced a resolution authorizing the awarding of a Congressional Medal of Honor to Charles A. Levine. To prevent possible misconception, it should be distinctly set out that it is for courage rather than that record tailspin of 13,000 feet.

Washington reports that the applications thus far received for admission to the citizens' military training camps, the coming summer, thus far number 47,069, an increase of 9,305 over the number received at this time last year. The pacifists, parlor pinks, reds and disloyalists generally seem to have made less impression on the public than they have in our federal legislative bodies.

Don't Use Stomach Like a Bag.

BY DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Not long ago the librarian of congress invited me to a luncheon. He had an interesting group about the table. Among the guests was Professor W. E. Soothill, professor of Chinese at Oxford University, England.

Prof. Soothill set us all laughing by reciting a little poem. It was a recital intended to warn Dr. Putnam's guests against overindulgence.

Here are the words:

Eat slowly; only men in rags,
Or gluttons deep in sin,
Mistake themselves for carpet bags
And tumble victuals in.

Funny, isn't it? It gave us a good laugh and in all probability increased our appetites in consequence.

The poem was written by Sir Walter Raleigh. Of course this is not the Sir Walter Raleigh, explorer, statesman, historian and poet, of Elizabeth's time. It is Sir Walter Raleigh, now professor of English at Oxford.

I trust you are not one of those who "mistake themselves for carpet bags and tumble victuals in." But if you are not, you are a rare person.

I truly believe the average individual eats too much. Many times I have said that you live on one-third of what you eat and the doctors live on the other two-thirds.

This statement is almost if not quite true, because most of us overeat and habitually overeat. I have no patience with folks who starve themselves for the sake of being slender. That is an evil worse if anything than sinful overeating. But everybody should be sensibly temperate in habits of eating.

It is surprising how much the intake of food can be reduced without the slightest decline in weight. This shows that the body does not use, but must get rid of much of the material taken into the stomach. Useless and perhaps harmful demands are made on the digestive and eliminative organs by everyday excesses.

In addition, as Sir Walter suggests, to eat slowly is of great importance to health. Only tramps or gluttons deep in sin should gulp their food and treat the stomach as if it were a dump heap or a place to "tumble victuals in."

Much of the food we eat consists largely of starch. This must be converted into sugar before it can be utilized by the body. The first step in this conversion is the mixture with the starch of large quantities of saliva. This can not be accomplished unless you eat slowly, thoroughly pulverizing the food.

I hope you will memorize this little poem. It should be recited at every meal.

Editorial Opinion.

WE NEED IT.

Ohio needs an habitual criminal law. The multiplicity of crimes in the state demands that such legislation be enacted at the earliest possible time. When every state in the union shall have such a law crime will be so appreciably reduced as to make society more secure than it has been in centuries.

This is not exaggeration, but, of course, implies a rigid enforcement of the law. It is believed that the sentiment in Ohio very largely is in favor of this legislation. Bar association units, without exception, are on record as favoring such an enactment. It is reasonable to believe that it would prove to be most salutory.

The committee on revision of the criminal law appointed by the State Bar association has agreed upon the provision that a fourth conviction on a felony charge, if felonies have been violent or harmful, shall be the rule, and the fourth conviction, in those circumstances, automatically will carry a sentence to prison for life, the court having no discretion in the matter.

This is as should be. A criminal who commits four major crimes certainly should be regarded as an habitual. And the plan of the committee is to include in the list of crimes to be regarded as violent and harmful murder, manslaughter, burglary, forgery, robbery, abduction, and perhaps other offenses.

All criticism of the Baumes law to the contrary, that law has been conspicuously effective in the state of New York. It will become fully effective when other states "join up."

Certain elimination from social freedom forever is a terrible punishment. If it should be made inflexible—if life sentences should be made to mean just what such commitments say—many a criminal would prefer the swift mercy of the death penalty. And the life sentence should be made to mean just what it says.

The sob brigades will lament that this is a too rigorous, a too drastic, penalty, and will do their utmost to prevent the passage of laws providing for it, but crime is out of bounds; it must be conquered; it never will be conquered by kissing the criminal on the cheek while he stabs you to the heart for what may lie in your pockets.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

DOCTORS ON BEAUTIFIERS.

Personal appearance is a matter of great importance these days, as any one can see by glancing at the magazines and papers, which carry advertisements of hundreds of articles intended to make women beautiful and men handsome. Possibly the complexion has more attention than anything else. Certainly staggering amounts are spent for barbering, cosmetics, beauty treatments and other means of improving the appearance of the skin.

The current issue of American Medicine is called the "dermatology number." Devoted largely to technical and scientific discussions, it also contains two or three articles of interest to the layman and easily understood. One of these is by a New York surgeon who corrects nasal deformities. Another takes up the hazards of the unsupervised beauty shops, in this city particularly.

One of the most instructive is by Dr. Lewis Webb of the Chicago Polyclinic on the complexion. He explains in great detail that enlarged pores, oily or dry skin, discoloration, wrinkles and sagging skin are not diseases, but symptoms. Childhood's good complexion does not depend upon massage, creams, masks and skin foods. Some of the preparations on the market he says are not dangerous, but neither are they a cure for conditions caused by deeply seated ailments. Many creams are injurious.

"The application of bleaching creams when anemia, jaundice, or goiter is the real cause should be discouraged."—New York Times.

The Self-Regenerating Universe.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

If ever the interplanetary rocket-train carries human beings into space beyond the earth, the voyagers will behold a marvelous, though momentary, vision of blue changing to black as they pass through and out of the earth's atmosphere. The exquisite cerulean ceiling that canopies the lower world will darken until suddenly the whole heavens will become a pall of jet-black velvet sprinkled with untwinkling diamond points, each an infinitesimal, but piercingly bright, core of pure incandescence.

Uncovered, unprotected, alone, exposed, naked as it were to infinite space, these adventurers will be buffeted by the storm of cosmic rays that rages, unperceived by our human senses on the earth, through those illimitable depths.

They will be in the immediate presence of eternal creative energy, the universal cradle of all matter and of life that is linked with matter. Such at least is the vision suggested by the latest discoveries concerning the most mysterious of physical phenomena, the "cosmic rays," investigated by Millikan during the last few years and often called by his name.

With his assistant, Cameron, he has lately discovered that these days, which come through the atmosphere with sufficient penetrative power left to pass to a depth of 200 feet in a pure mountain lake, are divisible, like light, into a spectrum consisting of bands having definite vibration frequencies.

In the light spectrum the different frequency bands correspond with certain colors, such as red, yellow, green, blue; in the spectrum of the cosmic rays the frequency bands, of which four have so far been found, mark vibrations which, by the Einstein theory of the relation of mass to energy, should be given off during the creation of helium from hydrogen, of oxygen from hydrogen, or nitrogen from hydrogen, and of iron from hydrogen.

An enormous amount of energy is assumed to be locked up in the nucleus of the hydrogen atom, where it appears in the form of mass. The hydrogen nucleus, although of almost infinitesimal size, is relatively the heaviest thing in existence. Practically the entire mass of a hydrogen atom is in the nucleus. But when the more complex atom of helium is formed out of hydrogen a certain amount of mass, or matter, is lost, or goes off in the form of vibrations of the ether. Proportionate amounts of matter are transformed into vibrations in the formation of the still more complex atoms of oxygen, nitrogen, iron and the other elements. These vibrations radiating in all directions through space constitute the "cosmic" rays which probably originate in the stars and nebulae, and perhaps in other unknown sources in the universe.

Thus the discovery of Millikan and Cameron is regarded as the first evidence that has ever been obtained that there exists in the universe a "building-up process" which results in replacing the "tearing-down process" shown by the phenomena of radio-activity. With some reserve, say the discoverers, and subject to further critical analysis, the cosmic rays may be taken as "announcements broadcast through the heavens of the birth of the ordinary elements out of positive and negative electrons."

This is a confirmation by science of the age-long faith that the universe is re-creative in its nature. Its law is eternal change, not tending to extinction.—Copyright, 1928, International Feature Service, Inc.

Twenty Years Ago.

This day was Thursday.

Two thousand lives were lost as the result of a flood, a typhoon and a fire in Kwang-Si province, China.

Flowers were very scarce and it was feared that there would be a decided shortage for Memorial day.

The Star told of a double-header the day before, Marion taking the first game, three to nothing, and losing the second, three to two. Lucas won his game as a result of four errors behind Doyle, each team making four hits. Fox was hit hard in the second contest while Merryman held the local team safe.

A marriage license was issued to Mrs. Anna K. Vollmer and John G. Evans.

The LaRue High school graduated a class of ten, the night before, so the Star reported—Demreal R. Morris, Zora M. Harder, Lester A. Landgrabe, Zoa M. Cleveland, Ada Faye Hosier, Alla B. Markey, Lola M. Shirk, Katherine Shira, Ethel A. Ledley and Walter D. Scranton.

With Wilmot pitching for Marion and Mercer and Bailey for Springfield, the local nine won, twelve to six. Marion made sixteen hard hits.

The annual commencement exercises of the Prospect High school were held at the opera-house there, the graduates being Mary Irene Fox, Nevin H. Schaaf, Henrietta May Kibler, Dale Williams Black, Maud Lelan Dillie, Addie Cecila Stockwell, Lloyd W. Dix, Belva Lenore Fox, Grayce Rosetta Miller, George Garrison Horn and Vena Hughes.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. William Johnson, of east Center street.

The lobbies of those dim-lit hotels in the "Forties" that change names with such frequency offer a colorful slice of Tenderloin life. The clerks are hard- boiled, furtive gentlemen who can only express themselves intelligently in underworld argot. In passable English they seem inarticulate.

Elevators are manned by work-worn and sullen colored boys who will only brighten up at a tip. Among lobby loungers every stranger is eyed with faint suspicion. Most of the patrons are racketeers living in fear of "the rap."

There are the high-waisted men with drooping cigarets and much fly talk who live on women. The lady shop-lifters are said to be their best providers. And there are the peroxided, wan-cheeked girls who also give street earnings to wastrels.

The public has been somewhat interested—not enough—in the problems that were discussed at the recent congress of American physicians and surgeons in Washington. From physicians who keep in the lead in their profession the layman learns many things that ought to interest him intensely. He learns of efforts to learn something of the relation of a stomach ulcer to a cancer and he finds out something about the manner of diagnosis. The big lesson, above all others, that the layman should get is the advisability of not neglecting his body when the first, slightest symptoms appear. From time to time we are told that Europeans have a bad opinion of Americans. They think we are materialistic, bad-mannered, waiting in culture, over-rich, too keen about machinery and not keen enough about art. Europeans think these things it is because they have been taught by Americans abroad. Too many so-called Americans think it is smart to travel abroad and curry favor and popularity by belittling their own country. Our own people accuse us of more ills and failures than Europeans by themselves would ever think of. With all its faults the American democracy is the greatest experiment in government the world has ever tried. We ought to be proud of that fact—and on proper occasions we ought to be proud enough to say so.

CONGRESS READY TO QUIT ON TUESDAY

Senate and House Begin Winding Up Their Legislative Program

Washington, May 26—With the first of the presidential conventions but two weeks away, the Seventieth Congress today began winding up its legislative program in order to adjourn its first session at 8 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

A battery of protests were fired at the adjournment maneuver by Senate opponents of the famous Boulder Dam bill aided by proponents of federal good roads legislation and the "big navy" bill. They demanded that Congress remain in session all week to break the desperate filibuster against the Boulder Dam bill, which has blocked action on it for the last three weeks.

Administration leaders, however, conceded that the filibuster would prevent final action on the bill whether Congress remained here another day or another week, were determined to jam through its adjournment resolution. Under a ruling by Vice President Dawes, the resolution cannot be debated and administration leaders announced they had sufficient votes to insure its adoption. The House already has adopted the resolution.

When the gavels of Dawes and Speaker Longworth sound the hour of departure, one of the busiest sessions since the war will have ended. Five great legislative achievements stood to the credit of Congress in its five-month session.

May 30th Memorial Day

AGAIN this great and prosperous nation celebrates the day consecrated to the memory of its countless heroes—those who gave their lives in defense of the lofty ideals and sound principles upon which our country's strength is firmly founded.

And just as a great nation grows and prospers through unwavering fidelity to certain ideals and principles, so, too, the success of a business depends upon the ideals and principles upon which it is founded.

Richman's Clothes, today, represent the crowning achievement of half a century devoted to these ideals and principles—to give men the finest materials and workmanship we can produce, at a price within easy reach of every purse—to value the customer's satisfaction above our immediate profit—to deal fairly with all those to whom we sell, those from whom we buy, and with all our employes.

The tremendous growth of our business—our great factories employing 2600 men and women who own Richman stock valued at $6,000,000.00—our 31 stores—and thousands upon thousands of customers who buy Richman's Clothes, year after year—all bear evidence that we have honestly lived up to our ideals.

Don't Make a Toy Out of Baby
—Babies Have Nerves—
By DOTTIE BRETTRAIN

Much of the nervousness in older children can be traced to the over-stimulation during infancy, caused by regarding baby as a sort of animated toy for the amusement of parents, relatives and friends. Baby may be played with, but not for more than a quarter of an hour to an hour daily. Beyond that, being handled, tickled, caused to laugh or even scream, will sometimes result in vomiting and invariably causes irritability, crying or sleeplessness.

Fretfulness, crying and sleeplessness from this cause can easily be avoided by treating baby with more consideration, but when you just can't see what is making baby restless or upset, better give him a few drops of pure, harmless Castoria. It's amazing to see how quickly it calms baby's nerves and soothes him to sleep; yet it contains no drugs or opiates. It is purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper. Leading physicians prescribe it for colic, cholera, diarrhea, constipation, sour stomach and bowels, feverishness, loss of sleep and all other "upsets" of babyhood. Over 25 million bottles used a year shows its overwhelming popularity.

With each bottle of Castoria, you get a book on Motherhood, worth its weight in gold. Look for Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package so you'll get genuine Castoria. There are many imitations.—Adv.

THESE MOVIES

DISPOSITION of the Sunday movies case here today undoubtedly is the most interesting news of the day. Those who favor Sunday movies and those who are not in favor of them will hang on the words of the jury foreman when he makes his report.

For a period of several years little was heard of Sunday movies outbreaks. There were cities that had them and cities that didn't have them. But, of late, exhibitors have bestirred themselves to the point of testing the law, admittedly of ancient vintage but nevertheless still a law.

Ashland theater owners are in the midst of a Sunday movies battle. Three owners pleaded guilty last week when they opened their houses and were fined $25.

Here in Marion the other theaters are reported awaiting the outcome of the Sharpless case. The Oakland stands ready to open, according to statements of the owner, while the new Palace and the Marion probably will seek Sunday patronage if Sharpless is acquitted.

According to word from Cleveland exhibitors are planning a legislative bill which will give each town its right to vote whether it wants Sunday shows. It is probable there will be a lot of argumentation, however, when the bill gets on the floor of the State Legislature. Kansas, Louisiana, Iowa and Missouri are other states giving the Sunday movies case a deal of attention.

OFF TO RACES

THOSE who like their races to be of the roaring rather than the snorting variety will jump in the buggy some time Tuesday and scamper off to the Hoosier capital for the annual 500-mile speed event.

With the exception of getting a good seat the most pertinent problem confronting the racing enthusiast is finding a good road to Indianapolis.

Past experience shows that the best route from Marion to Indianapolis takes one on State Route 4 through Marysville and Milford Center to State Route 55, a few miles south of Milford Center. Turning to the right at Route 55 one goes into Urbana where the motor is turned to the left in Monument Square to follow Route 53 to Springfield. In Springfield turn to the right at Main-st, following U. S. Route 40 to Brandt where the National Highway is left and State Route 201 is followed into Dayton. State Route 11 is followed out of Dayton to Richmond where one again meets U. S. Route 40 and takes the driver into Indianapolis.

Outside of a few miles between Milford Center and Urbana the roads from Marion to Indianapolis are improved and in good condition.

RULES OF SUCCESS

SOME time ago we wrote of the success of the Little Theater movement about Marion. One of the organizations listed was the Urbana Community Players. Dr. T. T. Brand has been at the head of this group for six years and recently in a talk at Xenia he outlined the rules of success for any such organization. Because of the embryonic interest in the Little Theater movement here extracts from his talk to the Xenia people are given here:

"In the formation of a theater organization, there are two factors to be considered," the speaker said. "One is the artistic and the other the practical. One is as important as the other.

"In our goal for the artistic we forget the practical, oftimes. The 'little theater' is the same in its requirements and stock as that of the mercantile establishment to its customers. For this reason you must be careful of your organization. Seven years ago, we started with thirty-five members in Urbana. This group included every type—the intellectuals who loved literature and the higher form of art; those that deplored the mire into which the modern stage has sunk; those who felt the urge to tread the "boards" after a few experiences; those who naturally loved the theater and others who added their interest out of civic pride.

"Such an organization must be diversified. We have made our meetings, from the start, open to all members. All of its rehearsals are open and all who attend go to obtain experience.

"The success of the venture depends on the efficiency of the management and your selling ability on your performances, which are your stock in trade. Please your customers, but realize that no entire audience will like the same thing.

"You are bound to make mistakes, but cater to all classes and offend none. Cling to the decent, clean and wholesome. The theater does not have to be vulgar and profane to be popular. Don't play over the head of anyone.

"It takes determination, self-sacrifice, control, but it benefits you and the community. You all have a common interest, it sheds a ray of light on the arts, and is a real asset for lovers of the craft."

A stubborn boy may be spoiled, but a bullheaded one can't be. He likes to fight his way and that needs sense.

ADMINISTER RITES AT GALION CHURCH

Class of 10 Receive Sacraments of Confirmation and Communion; Other Services

Galion, May 28—A class of 10 members was confirmed at the morning services at the First Reformed Church yesterday and received their first communion. Baptism of children and reception of new members were other important rites performed. Last night the members of the confirmation class assisted by the choir and several other musicians of the church gave an interesting program which was largely attended. Organ and piano accompaniment was used throughout with Kenneth Rensch, organist, and Miriam Sayre, pianist. Mendelssohn's "March of the Priests" from "Athalie" was used as the prelude. Hugh Shumaker, a member of the class, acted as chairman of the program, and introduced the participants. Elsie Beemer gave the scripture reading and Cleo Eichorn led in prayer. The vested choir, under the direction of Mrs. Donald Townsend, sang an anthem and Miss Naomi Tracht gave a soprano solo, "Arise, Shine, For Thy Light Is Come," by McDiarmid. For offertory an organ and piano number, "Chanson Triste," by Tchaikovsky, was used and following that Clark Zimmerman delivered the class address. Forest Hahn played a flute solo; Mary Schupp gave an appropriate reading; Mildred Pletcher and Lester Eichorn gave piano numbers; John Thomas sang a solo; Hugh Shumaker played a violin selection and read a history of the Reformed Church and Nevin Zeig read "Beyond the Years." The affairs given for the class will conclude tonight with the party which Rev. G. F. Zinn will give at his home, S. Boston-st.

Observe Visitors' Day

Visitors' Day was observed at the United Brethren Church and many were welcomed at the services.

Whit Sunday was fittingly celebrated at Grace Episcopal Church with Rev. Paul Due in charge and an important congregational meeting was held following the service last night.

"Some Little Things That Endanger the Happiness of the Home" was the title of Rev. Philip Auer's sermon to the congregation of Peace Lutheran Church last night, and a fitting Pentecost sermon was delivered in the morning. Tomorrow night another of the interesting "Family Night" series will be held at the church with members of the Brotherhood in charge. Following the program a social time and luncheon will feature the activities planned.

Market Street Services

"Pentecost Then and Now" and "How To Be a Successful Christian" were the topics discussed by Rev. Joseph Lamy of the Market Street Methodist Church and at the First Baptist Church Rev. E. C. Thompson preached a Memorial Day sermon, "The Good Soldier," and last night used as a subject "Three Elements in Righteousness."

Rev. R. F. Porter talked forcefully on the subject, "Is There a God?" yesterday morning at the services at First Presbyterian Church and at the First Methodist Rev. S. A. Stephan's sermon was "Extending the Kingdom."

"The Birthday of the Christian Church" and "Hope—A Sure Anchor of the Soul," were Rev. O. C. Kramer's topics at the services at First Lutheran Church.

There are not enough circuses now for the boys to run away with, so they runaway, anyway.

"What a Lot of Rugs You People Clean for a Few Dollars"

"I never dreamed that a rug could be cleaned so beautifully. Really, our house looks so cheerful and bright these days, everyone who comes in comments about our rugs. We had almost forgotten some of the colors were in the rugs until they came back from you.

"And it's astonishing how many rugs you can clean for a few dollars."

That's the kind of comment we hear almost daily over our telephones. More and more Marion people are learning that Anthony's are delivering a new kind of result—a new standard of service—in rug cleaning.

CHAPTER 60

T[illegible] incident stepped into the [illegible] a small pistol from a [illegible] hardware department, [illegible] cartridges, loaded the [illegible] upon it. He rear[illegible] That he strolled out [illegible] to accost Bob Mason. [illegible]ner," he hailed the [illegible] [illegible]son. Mr. McNaughton. [illegible] your chief is here."

"I'm here, Mason."

[illegible] now put in silent interro[illegible] Mason permitted himself a [illegible] [illegible]pe stand for a killing, Mason [illegible] right for you in that [illegible] superintendent warned [illegible] he added, "that I don't [illegible] I've heard all about [illegible] with him, and I admit he [illegible] but bad as he is he's my [illegible] and I'll have to protect [illegible] him from that. You got a gun or a knife on you, Mason?"

"Search me if you doubt my word that I have not, McNaughton. And I haven't come to kill him. I've triumphed over him, and my job call at San Quentin is waiting for him. Time was when, under similar circumstances, I'd have gone right into his office and pumpeled him without mercy, but I'm scarcely the man I used to be."

"What do you want to see him about?"

"Idle curiosity. I never had a good straight look at Jethroe. It was late in the afternoon when he testified against me at my trial and the light in the court-room was bad. He sat with his face averted and tried to hide it from me with his hand.

"And I thought, if I could get close enough to him and he looked natural I might muse him up some. He might give me a good fight, and I could spoil him for a month. That would make me feel good—and I haven't felt good for quite a spell."

The quaint bluntness of that speech appealed to McNaughton's sense of humor, as well as to his dramatic instincts. He sympathized deeply with this despoiled mountaineer. Had he stood in Mason's shoes he would have yearned to muss Jethroe up a little himself.

"Give me your word of honor you won't kill him or cripple him and I'll not interfere," McNaughton pleaded.

Bob Mason extended his hand. "Word of honor, McNaughton."

The imp in McNaughton came to the surface shamelessly. "Very well. Jethroe just went into his office in the store. He's scared to death right now."

Mason rode over to the store, dismounted, dropped his reins and strolled through to the office in the rear. He saw Jethroe kneeling on one knee in front of the company's huge safe, his back turned toward the gate in the office railing.

The store also housed the Ingwood Flats post-office, a small room with eight foot walls and no ceiling, built in on the left of the general office, and Davis, the assistant manager of the store, who was also the postmaster, was standing just back of Jethroe speaking to him as Bob Mason entered and leaned against the office rail without bothering to make his presence known to either.

"I've always used the company's safe for my stamps and money-order blanks Mr. Jethroe," the postmaster was saying.

"I know, but government business is not the business of the Hercules Hydraulic Mining Company, Davis. The post-office department pays us a nominal rental for that little office and furnishes you with a small safe. You should use that and not have your stamps and money-order blanks cluttering up the company's safe.

"You are not the only employee of the company who has access to this safe, and I don't want non-government employees to have to accept with you the responsibility for government property. Hereafter you keep your post-office valuables in the post-office safe."

"It's such a little safe," the postmaster protested. "One never knows when some wandering yegg will rob a country post-office, and it wouldn't take a very strong man to pick my safe up and run away with it. What are you looking for, Mr Jethroe?"

"For some of my personal papers. I want to clean everything out of the safe and send it to San Francisco for inclusion in my safe-deposit box. I [illegible] there for about two years when we first commenced operations, and accumulated quite a lot of papers I have never bothered to remove. I think my fire-insurance policies are in the vault. Chap over in Montague wrote me a couple of policies—fire and accident—What's this bundle doing here?" He looked at it and read. Property of Zeb Thornly. Who's he?"

"He has a little ranch over south of here about ten miles. Runs cattle in the San Dimas. He brought that envelope in a couple of years ago and asked me to put in the vault for safe keeping."

"You shouldn't do that," Jethroe protested. "We accept responsibility for other peoples' valuable papers? They don't pay you for it, do they?"

"No, sir, but they trade at the store and we're apter into the habit of granting them little favors like that. When these hillbillies have a mortgage, or a promissory note, or a life-insurance policy, or an accumulation of old tax bills they get worry me about keeping them at their cabins, in case the shack catches fire.

"They don't know anything about safe-deposit vaults, and besides, if they did, safe-deposit vaults are too far away and cost from $5 to $10 a year. So they bring their papers down to me and ask me to take care of them. They'd think I was unneighborly if I refused. We have a lot of room in that vault and their things mean a lot to them."

Jethroe was skimming through the envelopes. "Property of Mrs Jane Gruber, property of Anne Hastings, property of Iwan Burwell—I should say you're doing quite a business Hyde—property of Ashforth Dale. What the devil is this doing here? Dale has been dead more than two years."

"By gravy," the postmaster declared. "I plum forgot about that. I must take it up to Monica Dale the first chance I get."

Jethroe weighed the envelope in his hands. "I wonder what's in it?" Mason heard him murmur, more to himself than to the postmaster.

"Probably a lot of old receipts, notices of completion of assessment work, filings on claims—a will, maybe, Mr. Jethroe."

Jethroe stood up and half turned. Mason saw him scrutinizing the dusty envelope; presently he put it into the inside breast pocket of his coat. "I have to run up to Bogus to see Miss Dale today," he announced, "so I might as well bring this up to her. You still got that gray horse I used to ride?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, have him saddled and brought around here right after luncheon, Davis, and I'll ride up to Bogus."

He knelt again and commenced rummaging in the vault, the postmaster continuing to stand behind him and watch his operations with respectful solicitude. Noiselessly Bob Mason stepped over to the post-office window, out of sight, and with a little shelving at the delivery window to call attention to his presence. Davis hurried around into the post-office and peered through the window at him.

"Nothing doing, today, Bob," he announced. "Mail don't get in from Siskiyou Center for two hours yet!"

Mason thanked him with a nod and strolled out of the store, mounted his horse and rode over to the blacksmith shop, where he sat his mount and conversed with the smith until he saw Jethroe hurrying across the lot between the general store and his bungalow.

Instantly he whirled his horse and dashed toward him at a gallop; Jethroe hearing the sound of hurrying hoofs, looked over his shoulder recognized the rider, and started to run. He reached the gate in a fence of five-foot pointed palings surrounding his house and slammed it shut behind him; he heard the click of the latch and realized that before Mason could lean down from his horse, open the gate, enter and come pounding after him up the garden path, there would be ample time to reach the house.

Once there he would be safe. There was a shotgun in the house. He did not know whether it was loaded or not, but then neither would Mason. He would threaten him with it. If the man dared to pursue him into his own house—what was that old point in common law?—ah, yes. Every man's house is his castle. Why, he could shoot Mason for that, and nobody could do a thing about it—

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

YESTERDAY was Sunday, and the first thing when me and Jubilee woke up I thought there was bees in the feed box and we listened a bit but caught the squirrels a-[illegible] Jubilee down by the [illegible] and put on my breeches. Then I went down and fixed the kitchen fire and emptied the ashes and took the pail out to the barn to milk the dilatory Bessie.

The whole family was there in the barn taking turns I reckon to peek into the hole in the top of the feed box and there was a lot of scuffling around the side of it. I was sure the squirrels was in there but I couldn't see what to get the first one we should let out. Finally I left a pitchfork over the door and the bunch of us across the box and that got the last down on the side of it, and a lot more came running [illegible] the hole [illegible] to rush, and when we had all them up the bunch and the box what was I mucked the cows and oil my face and got washed till I was so red I was almost, and then we didn't know what to do with the squirrels.

Dynicky has got a wire cage so we went past his house and got it, and then we went to the Sunday School so as to get there before any one came and we could let the squirrels out in the empty room and catch them and put them in the wire cage before anyone came. So we locked our dogs outside and got in and shut the little room, and then we opened the box and shook them out, and the squirrels were the three biggest rats that ever I see, and Nobby and Mike came and went in, and then Rena's grandmother and a couple of the cows and [illegible] happened, and then half a dozen of the other class were going in the room when all that were in were busily cut screaming and we ran over and went [illegible] in and our dogs got the rats. The paper said it was the first time he knowed bees were any account.

Today was Monday. The last Monday we will be in school for quite a while. Why school let out we all went to my house and we made a box trap to catch the squirrel. I am going to tame him and have a lot of fun with him. I will train him to climb trees and knock nuts down for me. I have never had a squirrel.

Prescription He Wrote in 1892 is the World's Most Popular Laxative

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. It seem that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used in his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

W. B. Caldwell, M.D. AT AGE 83

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.—Adv.

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Womans Lasting Affections

BY ADELE GARRISON

Madge Endures an Agony of Suspense

AT Katie's wail of "Junior" and her burst of sobs, I felt for an instant as if something icy had grasped my heart and stilled its beating. Then as terror had its way with me, I sprang toward her.

"Where?" I cried, with hands outstretched to shake a coherent answer from her. But Mr. Underwood was ahead of me, and in a twinkling had torn away the apron which characteristically she had swept over her face, and with an iron grip of her shoulders had swung her around facing him.

"Stop this noise," he commanded harshly. "Where is Junior? What has happened?"

Katie choked and obeyed the steel in his voice.

"He in orchard. He fall out of tree and he no speak."

But I was at the head of the stairs before she had finished.

"Get Dicky and Lillian!" I threw back over my shoulder as I dashed down the stairs through the hall and out the kitchen door, the nearest to the orchard. Behind me Mr. Underwood's voice boomed a message.

"I'll telephone for the doctor. You stay with the kid."

As I threw open the door I saw that there was no need to find Dicky. With a face from which every bit of color was drained, he was striding toward the house, our boy held carefully in his arms while Jim stumped beside him clearing every obstacle out of his way. As he saw my face he answered the question I dared not ask.

"No, he isn't——" he halted at the word, "but he's stunned. Get a doctor, quick. Where'll I put him?"

"Dicky's getting the doctor," I panted, whipping my handkerchief from my hand, and stooping instantly to my knees while Dicky laid his precious burden down. "Bring him right up to my room. I'll go ahead and get the bed ready."

Put Mother Graham had insisted upon having her go with her to the village upon a shopping trip. I realized however that my mother-in-law's absence was a fortunate thing. The restless boy grandson and her beast is weak. If she had heard Katie's wild cry the result might have spelled tragedy.

"Pettit will be here inside of ten minutes," Harry Underwood's voice, controlled, strengthening, came from the doorway. "Caught him on a call at Bridgehampton. That's the advantage of having small country telephone circuits and helpful operators. I told Central my troubles and she found him for me at once."

His voice, the inconsequential words steadied me, as I guessed he meant them to do. And by the time he had finished speaking he was standing beside the bed. Dicky stepped to one side and motioned his friend toward the little figure and Mr. Underwood bent over the bed scanning the boy intently. From somewhere I recalled the fact that this man had seen much ambulance service during the war and I felt vaguely comforted when, after he had changed the little chap's position slightly, he turned to Lillian, took a wet piece of cotton from her and lightly sponged the blood from a small jagged flesh wound on Junior's cheek. He did it with an air that subtly conveyed his conviction that the [illegible] was not a serious one, and though I knew that he was deliberately [illegible] the effort for our reassurance [illegible] that my anguished suspense [illegible] eased.

There was nothing [illegible] could. He [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
